Court Change Foes Attack Roosevelt, 'Gag' Tactics

Bailey Asserts President Is Seeking 'Hitched' Judiciary.

O'Mahoney Denies Filibuster Charge

Also Denounces 'Steam Roller' Methods of Robinson.

By Robert C. Albright.

The President yesterday came directly in range of the court bill counter-offensive, as embattled opponents turned their hot fire of words against the Senate leadership and the President himself.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, slight, but deep-lunged, opened the second week of debate. He made a booming denunciation of what he called "steam roller" and "gag" tactics by Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson. He said the court bill was designed to "hold a club" over the judiciary."

Before the echo of his onslaught had died, Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, sardonic former Baptist editor, was on his feet in a torrent of critical comment on the President's court-bill utterances.

"He wants a court that will make legislation to be proposed by him constitutional," shouted Bailey. Using the President's victory dinner speech as one basis of attack, Bailey said the Administration wanted it "Now! Now! Now!"

Cites Horse Analogy.

Then, quoting the President's "three-horse team" analogy, he continued:

"Senators, get the picture. The court has got to pull his way and the way of Congress—that is the idea. When did courts get to pulling before? Courts declare the law. Courts find the truth. Nobody rides in a buggy behind the courts. Courts are not hitched up. Courts heretofore have been free and independent."

He said the purpose is to get "a court which will construe the Constitution, the way the other two horses are pulling."

And he spoke for a great section of the opposition, when he said: "We will accept no compromise that does not leave the courts of our land as independent as they are at this moment, as independent as they have been these 150 years of honor and glory."

O'Mahoney, first of the opponents to get down to an actual analysis of the substitute court bill itself, charged proponents of the measure with ignorance of its terms and a refusal to explain it.

Denies Filibuster.

But first he came directly to grips with the leadership. Confronting Senate Majority Leader Robinson, he denied existence of a filibuster, assailed the rules invoked to break one, and charged to the leadership itself any "delays" that may develop in other legislation.

"The effort is being made to lead the country to believe that all the business of the Senate is being stopped by these 'vicious filibusterers,'" O'Mahoney said. "There has been no filibuster upon this measure.

"The only talk about filibuster upon this floor has proceeded from the mouth of the majority leader, the leader of the Democratic Party in the Senate, in threats that he had the votes to pass the bill and would pass it without debate, or with only that debate which could be carried on by Senators who are compelled to watch every question that is propounded to them lest they be taken off the floor in the midst of their discussion."

Robinson Renews Charge.

Robinson slapped back in defense of the rules, renewing his charge of filibuster. The sixth day of bitter debate was on.

Opponents high heartedly entered the second week with claims of a sympathetic reaction from the country, and forecasts of victory "without the necessity of filibuster."

"Another two or three weeks ought to tell the story," said Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska. Defeat of the court measure, Burke predicted may come in one of three ways—by sending it back to committee, by substituting a constitutional amendment or even by a straight up and down vote.

The Nebraskan said 2,500 letters and telegrams reached his office Saturday, and all but one were hostile to the bill. Senator Burton

Oliver Owen Kuhn Is Reported Dying

Oliver Owen Kuhn, managing editor of the Star, who has been ill for several weeks, was in a "very grave" condition last night in Emergency Hospital.

A member of his household reported his physicians have given up hope for his recovery and feared he might not live for more than a week.

Kuhn, 51, came to Washington in 1909 and for many years has directed the editorial and news policies of the Star both as news and managing editor. He also was managing editor of the Indianapolis Sun and news editor of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman and the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium. He is a native of Crawfordsville, Ind.

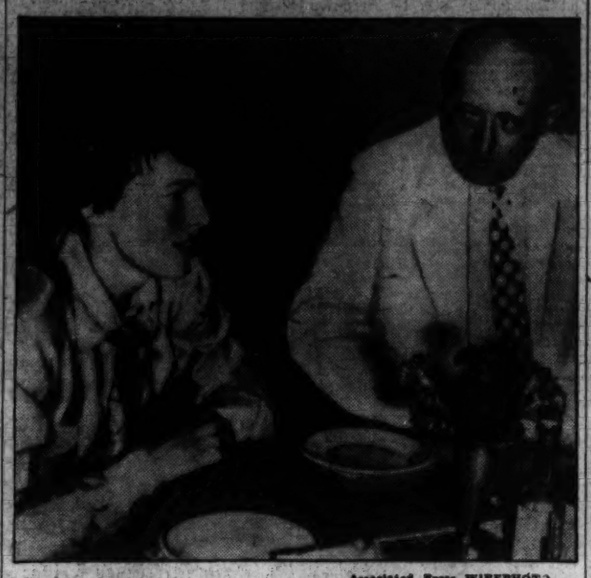
63 Navy Planes Poised To Join Earhart Hunt



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Lexington Nears Area, Stations Lookouts; Air Armada May Extend Search to Gilbert Islands, Open Sea as Last Hope.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, July 12.—The aircraft carrier Lexington lined its flying deck with fighting planes and posted special lookouts today, ready to launch its mighty forces into a final hunt for Amelia Earhart.

Approaching the northeastern border of the 265,000-mile search area, which centers about Howland Island, the big ship was tuned from stem to stern for the greatest aerial search in history.

The lookouts, stationed at every vantage point aboard, hoped for some trace of the aviatrix and her navigator, Fred Noonan, who vanished 10 days ago in a vain attempt to reach Howland Island.

The 63 planes were checked, fueled and in position for quick take-offs with 126 fliers. The take-offs were tentatively scheduled to start at dawn tomorrow.

Hope was at its lowest ebb everywhere among the far-flung searching units.

Admiral O. G. Murfin, in charge of the search here, indicated the job of the Lexington's air fleet would be in the nature of a "mop-up" operation over areas previously scanned but not including the Phoenex Islands, which were searched by two warships and three catapult planes.

The Lexington did not overlook the possibility the world-circling Earhart plane still might be afloat, although technicians and friends of the missing fliers days ago concluded the main prospect of rescue lay in the chance the fliers landed on an island or a coral reef.

In that connection Admiral Murfin said the Lexington's planes might reach out as far as the Gilbert Islands, 600 miles west of Howland.

Besides the Lexington, the mine sweeper Swan and the Coast Guard cutter Itasca remained on the job, but the battleship Colorado, with its three catapult planes, headed back toward Honolulu.

President Kills Bill to Extend Farmer Loans

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed the bill to extend for two years the present low interest rate on Federal Land Bank loans, and then almost immediately sent identical letters to the heads of the two Congressional Agriculture committees urging "sympathetic consideration" for his farm stabilization program.

The three points in the program were given as:

1. Continuation of the present agricultural conservation program as the foundation of the long-time plan.

2. The ever normal granary plan for storage of substantial reserves of food for use in years of crop failure.

3. Protection of farm prices and farm income.

The President, addressing Senator Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina, and Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, the two chairmen, said that although much progress has been made, the problem of crop stability had not been solved. Apparently having in mind the huge crops indicated for this year, he wrote:

"Warning signals are already in sight."

"Though the situation at the moment is excellent," he wrote further, "we have no safeguard, even in the year 1938, against the great danger of loss of income due

Jurors Brought In Off Streets At Racket Trial

Challenges Exhaust Panel as Prince Georges Case Is Opened.

Five times yesterday, Sheriff Guy Bell went out into the fields, the highways and the byways of Prince Georges County to summon jurors as the Circuit Court of Upper Marlboro, Md., strove vainly to complete selection of a jury to try the nine men under indictment for conspiracy to obstruct justice and to defraud motorists in an alleged traffic arrest racket.

Last night when the court adjourned until 10 a. m. today there were still two vacancies in the jury box.

Time after time, jurors, grimy and sweaty from the day's toil, from which they were summoned by court order, were questioned by the judge only to be dismissed from duty because of the objections of the prosecution or defense attorneys.

Altogether, the prosecution used 54 of its alloted 90 challenges and the defense 30 out of a permissable 180.

An investigation which led to the indictment of the nine, including seven policemen, a bondsman and a justice of the peace, was begun last fall by the Keystone Automobile Club and Louis Lebowitz, Mount Rainier attorney.

In sworn affidavits filed with the Keystone Automobile Club, scores of Washington motorists charged they were compelled to pay out money purportedly for fines and costs on traffic charges, but that this money never was turned over to the county treasury.

Soviet Fliers Cross Pole in Snowstorm

Cyclone Area Passed Safely; Pilot Sends Wire to Stalin.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow (Tuesday), July 13.—The Russian airmen flying to the United States over the top of the world crossed the North Pole at 3:14 a. m. today (7:14 p. m., Monday, E. S. T.) in a snowstorm.

They reached the Pole just 8 minutes under 24 hours after their take-off from Moscow in an attempt to better the world record for long distance in a straight line and to demonstrate the feasibility of a European-American air link over the Arctic.

The red-winged plane, piloted by Mikhail Gromoff, with Andrei Yumosheff as co-pilot and Sergei Danilin as navigator, crossed the Pole at an altitude of 2,700 meters (8,858 feet) at a speed of a fraction under 100 miles an hour.

He added that the crew was well and everything in order despite the weather conditions.

Pass Over Cyclone.

At 12:15 a. m. (4:15 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.) they reported they were passing over a cyclone area. They passed over Rudolf Island at 10:01 p. m. last night (2:01 p. m., E. S. T. Monday).

A party of Russians on the island, some 560 miles from the Pole on the European side, reported hearing the plane for four minutes, but failed to sight it because of clouds.

Gromoff planned to set his course on the 120th meridian (which passes east of San Francisco) after crossing the Pole and to fly as far south in the United States as possible.

Try to Break Record.

"We consider the main purpose of the flight," he said, "to confirm again the possibility of regular communications intercontinentally by way of the Pole. We also wish to attempt to break the record for long distance in a straight line. . . . Our flight will be made in accordance with all rules of the International Aeronautic Foundation."

Copilot Yumosheff said the plane was expected to cover about 10,000 kilometers (more than 6,200 miles) in between 60 and 65 hours, at an approximate speed of 100 miles an hour.

Cromoff obtained the Kremlin's permission to make the flight June 10 and had intended to take off at the same time as Valeria Chekaloff and his two companions, who landed June 20 in Vancouver, Wash., but his plane was not ready and bad weather caused subsequent delay.

Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, whose Northern Sea Route, a government department, sponsored the new flight, said the airmen would attempt to clinch definitely the world distance record. The record is held by the Frenchmen, Maurice Rossi and Paul Codos, who flew 5,657 miles from New York to Syria in 1933.

Send Wire to Stalin.

It was estimated the plane had enough fuel to remain in the air for three days, which would enable it to penetrate deep into the United States unless it met with an accident or head winds.

Before they took off, the fliers sent a telegram to Josef Stalin thanking him for his support and declared:

"The route from Moscow over the North Pole to the United States will be converted into a regular line."

A third trans-polar flight is expected to be attempted soon with Sigismund Levaneffsky as pilot.

Although the Soviet press today extolled the merits of Soviet-made airplanes, it was learned there has been a considerable increase in the number of Soviet engineers going to the United States to study American craft.

2 More Die As Heat Still Grips Capital

Men Latest Victims; 6 Prostrated; Mercury Hovers in 90's.

Nation's Toll Now Stands at 346; Siege May Last Till Thursday.

Relenting a scant 3 degrees, the heat wave which has held Washington in its grip for a week took two more lives yesterday and prostrated six.

The Weather Bureau offered a little encouragement for Washington's heat sufferers last night with a forecast for today of thundershowers and "not quite so warm."

Thermometers, which have been hovering around 94, dropped off to 91 here yesterday. Local thunder showers gave temporary respite to parts of the Nation, as 12 new deaths pushed the total to 346. Yesterday's six marked a sharp decline compared to early days.

The unremitting attack on Washington was tempered somewhat yesterday by light breezes.

Frank Douglas, 1248 New Jersey avenue, died in Emergency Hospital last night a few hours after he collapsed from the heat at Twenty-sixth and Water streets southwest.

The death of Thomas J. Cotton, 55, visiting from Laurel Springs, N. J., was attributable partly to heat. He collapsed of a heart attack aggravated by the warm weather and was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Emily Waites, 6 months, died in her crib at 612 T street northwest, and for a time authorities believed heat to have been the cause. The coroner's office announced last night, however, death was caused by pneumonia.

These deaths brought the week's total for Washington up to ten. Five prostrations pushed the total to 32 here. Those overcome were:

A woman whose name was not immediately learned was made ill by the heat in the 500 block of U street northwest.

Two heavy rains drenched Chicago during the day and dropped the mercury temporarily. Northern South Dakota received its first rain in a month. Many other sections between the Rockies and New England received rains.

"Half a chance" of showers last night or this morning was held out by the Weather Bureau for Washington.

Girl, Persuaded From Death Leap, Held by Police

A pretty, dark-haired girl, 20 years old, returned last night to the scene of her childhood and from a window ledge on the sixth floor of an apartment house in the 2100 block of F street northwest, prepared to take her life in a leap to the sidewalk below.

That her plan failed, as did another contemplated from the eighth floor of the same apartment, is due to the strength and logic for living offered by a colored elevator operator, Caleb Crook, 36, a student at Howard University.

The girl is a dancer. Police declined to reveal her name but she told them, they said, she had lived in Washington, spending her childhood in a home directly across the street from the apartment house.

Recently married, she and her husband quarreled, she said.

Crook started down, then came back and found the girl on the window ledge, contemplating the ground. He grabbed her, persuaded her that "suicide is not the best way out," and encouraged her to leave, after pressing on her a $1 bill.

Ten minutes later she returned, running up the stairway to the eighth floor, where Crook's persuasion failed, so he and another elevator operator, Henry James, 27, also colored, held her for police.

Police took the girl to Gallinger Hospital. In the pocketbook handed Crook they found a note, beginning:

"Dear Michael."

Love Match Is Over, Helen Moody in Reno

Helen Wills Moody, famed tennis star, who consulted a divorce lawyer upon her arrival at Reno, Nev., yesterday. She told newspapermen she had come for a "rest."

Former World's Tennis Champion in Nevada for 'Rest,' Plan to Seek Divorce Revealed; Husband 'Up North' on Camping Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, July 12.—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, former women's tennis champion of the world, established herself today at a Nevada vacation retreat and conferred with an attorney, who said she may seek a divorce.

When the former Wimbledon and National tennis champion arrived at Glennbrook, Lake Tahoe resort, she said she planned merely to "rest."

Later, she drove here and conferred with Attorney Robert M. Price, who announced she would consider divorce action against Frederick J. Moody, jr., San Francisco oil executive.

"Mrs. Moody is living in Nevada and expects to be here for some time," Price added.

In San Francisco, her sister-in-law, Mrs. Corbitt Moody, said the court star would divorce her husband.

Moody, who married the former Helen Wills December 23, 1929, was reported somewhere "up north" on a camping trip.

The romance of the tennis star and her socially prominent husband blossomed on the French Riviera in 1926, the year she temporarily was forced out of European and National court competition by illness.

Just a year ago, Mrs. Moody announced her retirement from major tournaments, declaring she would play only in matches which did not interfere with her work as a fashion-designer.

She was out of competition from 1933, when a back injury forced her to default to Helen Jacobs in the National finals, until 1935 when, after weeks of secret practice, she staged a surprise comeback and defeated Miss Jacobs in the All-English championships at Wimbledon.

Recently, Mrs. Moody has written a book and conferred with Hollywood motion picture officials concerning possible picture work.

King Foresees Early Passage Of Airport Bill

By James D. Secrest.

Strong sentiment for construction of a monumental national airport at Camp Springs, to be financed entirely by the Federal Government, was expressed yesterday by members of the Washington Airport Commission as its report was made public by the House.

Senator King, chairman of the commission, also expressed confidence that legislation authorizing creation of the flying field will be passed before Congress adjourns and that a WPA or PWA allocation may be obtained to finance the project.

King said he will confer with members of the commission this week regarding the drafting of a bill to carry out the commission's recommendations.

If the cost of the airport is to be borne wholly by the Federal Government, however, the legislation will not be referred to the House and Senate District Committees. It probably would be referred to the Senate Commerce Committee and the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Favor U. S. Paying Cost.

Expressions the Federal Government should bear the entire cost of the airport were made by Representatives Mary T. Norton, former chairman of the District Committee; Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, long active in the local airport inquiry, and Vincent Palmi-

Taxi Insurance Voted by House In Brief Fight

Limitation Bill Defeated; Realty Deal Regulation Passed Unopposed.

Compulsory liability insurance for Washington taxicabs, which the House had stoutly opposed for several years on the ground it would raise fares, was adopted by the House yesterday after a mild struggle.

At the same time the House defeated another measure which would have permitted the Public Utilities Commission to limit the number of cabs.

The House also approved, without debate, a bill which has been pending on Capitol Hill for several years, to regulate real estate transactions in Washington.

An amendment to the taxicab insurance bill, which would permit associations to file $75,000 bonds or set up equal sinking funds and maintain that cash reserve, was accepted by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who piloted the bill through the House.

Rep. Norton Joins Fight.

Nichols predicted the insurance measure, if accepted by the Senate, will necessitate an increase in fares of 5 cents per zone and will bring about a reduction in the number of cabs operating by eliminating operators who are financially irresponsible.

The required insurance would limit the liability of the insurer to $5,000 for bodily injury or death and $1,000 for property damage, on one judgment, or $10,000 and $1,000 for all judgments arising out of the same accident.

Japan, China Renew Battle; Tokyo Calls War Council

Governors Summoned; 'State of Emergency' Is Declared.

Both Sides Rush Troops to Front

Nippon Banks to Buy Gold; Hull Warns Two Envoys.

The Far East Crisis.

Fighting broke out again near Peiping following collapse of the latest truce in Sino-Japanese hostilities. Both sides rushed reinforcements to the trouble zone.

Japan's Heads Called.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Tuesday), July 13.—The Japanese cabinet, meeting in emergency session, took the unprecedented step of calling all prefectural governors to Tokyo for a confernece on the North China crisis.

The action followed declaration of a "state of emergency" in Manchukuo and Japan's Kwantung leased territory. Japanese authorities expressed fear of Chinese air raids in making the announcement.

The perfectural governors were summoned to meet Thursday.

The action, coupled with the government's convocation of all Japan's big industrialists, bankers and business men for a similar war conference, created a sensation here.

Battle Rages Again.

Peiping (Tuesday), July 13.—Big guns roared again today as Japanese-Chinese hostilities west of Peiping resumed with collapse of the latest truce, and both sides continued moving reinforcements into the zone of conflict.

A lull in the heavy fighting that has continued for six days occurred last night following reports authorities of the Hopei-Chahar political council, the North China administrative body, had negotiated a settlement with the Japanese.

In Nanking, however, the foreign office told the Japanese embassy there could be no valid settlement of the trouble "without the sanction of the central government." Resumption of the fighting followed.

Firing Heard in Peiping.

The chatter of machine guns, punctured by the roar of artillery, was clearly audible in Peiping. Chinese and Japanese alike expressed deep anxiety over the renewal of hostilities.

The fighting was nearer Peiping than previous clashes, which began Wednesday night along the Yungting River, 10 miles west of the city, when Japanese infantrymen on night maneuvers collided with troops of the Chinese Twenty-ninth Army.

Chinese reports said the new fighting started when Japanese infantrymen stationed at Tachingtsun, a village on the Peiping-Wanpinghsien highway 4 miles east of the river, advanced to within firing range of Chinese troops holding Tsaishenmiao (Temple of the God of Wealth), only 2 miles from Peiping's walls.

The Tokyo government sought to strengthen its financial position to be ready for emergencies.

It authorized the Bank of Japan to purchase liberal quantities of gold bullion and newly-mined gold held by merchants, individuals and corporations, effective tomorrow, to aid stability of the yen.

It ordered the Bank of Japan, the Yokohama Specie Bank and other leading financial institutions to take all measures to maintain the present value of the yen abroad—about 28.7 cents.

Japan Unites for Crisis.

With heavy Japanese reinforcements en route to the Peiping area from Japan proper, Korea and Manchuria, the major political parties, long at odds with the army and the government, pledged full support of the cabinet in the conflict with China.

Government committees of the Minseito and Seiyukai, largest of the parties, went on record as favoring the government's warlike

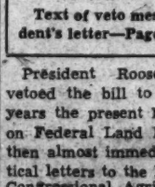
Senators Spurn Paris Trip; Prefer Court Fight to Battlefields

The American public seems headed for the jolt of a lifetime—the sight of a $175,000 junket trip no Senator will agree to take, with one Senator refusing to "leave sight of the Capitol for a round-trip ticket to Heaven."



PITTMAN, Perplexed.

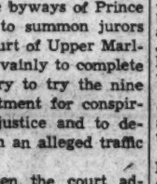
In almost any year gone by any Senator would have given at least one eye tooth for the privilege of being a junketeer member of the American Battle Monuments Commission, which will sail next week aboard the liner Manhattan for a month-long stay in France. For once, however, the Senate has a piece of business so interesting Paris offers no attractions—and battle lines so well drawn that the Argonne becomes just a bygone piece of history.

So long as the Supreme Court Bill hangs fire, every Senator intends to hang around, let the July heat fall where it may.

Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, leader of court bill opponents, summed up his feelings on the matter roughly as follows:

"While this bill is up, I wouldn't leave sight of the Capitol Building for a round-trip ticket to Heaven. I hear nice things said about Paris, France, but the stern clear call of duty to our principles is ringing like a bugle, etc., etc."

The Senate Democrats met in solemn conclave last week to choose the lucky members who would lay down their heavy burdens and surge off to the battlefields (with stopovers).

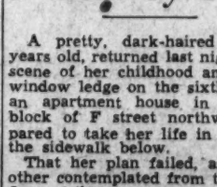


BURKE, Boiling.

Senator Key Pittman, president pro tem of the Senate, announced he would appoint whoever the group selected to represent the 17 Democratic World War veterans. There was some preliminary fumbling and tentative false moves, until Senator Burke spoke up.

There came a stunned hush over the council table, it is said. Several experienced old junketeers shuddered visibly. Others winced and then covered their eyes.

But the court bill opponents, stout of heart, responded to a man. One by one they ruthlessly trampled on tradition and waved the word "duty" like a banner. Forcing out of their minds the mental picture of a glass of vin rouge at a sidewalk cafe on the Rue de la Paix; driving from their thoughts pressed duck at Foyot's—they pledged themselves to fight it out on the air-cooled Senate floor.



LAMBETH, Lucky.

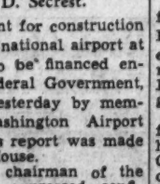
One Senator, noncommital on the court bill—F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin—finally was chosen tentatively for the delegation. Last night he was not at all sure he would go. "It's all up in the air," he said.

The House, working fast and in high gear—and letting the Senate be the stop-gap—whammed through the selection of three veterans to help Gen. Pershing, and could have found at least several score more eager and ready to go.

The selections were Representatives Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama; J. Walter Lambeth (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Charles Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey.

As a usual thing, the only pretext for a junket is a resolution asking for a first-hand Congressional investigation of such problems as the relief situation in suburban Bombay, India, or official representation at such events as the meeting of the veterans of Aguinaldo's army in the Philippines. (Always with stopovers, of course.)

Pittman is waiting patiently for some Senator to approach him and offer himself as a martyr to the cause of battlefield dedications, but there is no indication his patience will be rewarded.



DUFFY, Dubious.

Gen. John J. Pershing is chairman of the commission and the President already has signed the resolution which says three Representatives and three Senators may accompany him to dedicate chapels and memorials on battlefields—with Paris thrown in for good measure.

Somehow, history-making though it may be, that junket won't seem right without at least one Senator on board the liner Manhattan next week when it sails for those battlefields, Paris, and what not.

And incidentally, it is a baffling mystery to most observers why someone has not appeared who would be delighted to escape the court row.

Taxi Insurance Voted by House In Brief Fight

Limitation Bill Defeated; Realty Deal Regulation Passed Unopposed.

(Democrat), of New Jersey, former District Committee chairman, joined her erstwhile colleagues to wage an unsuccessful fight for the limitation bill.

"I overheard members in the lobby say that they wouldn't vote for this measure because it would result in an increase in fares," she said.

Clashes With O'Connor.

While defending the bill, which she had introduced, she crossed sharp words with Chairman O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, who had taken the floor to denounce the measure as "contrary to the principles of American life."

The District day was the first on which Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, had been in charge of local legislation in his own right. He expressed gratification two controversial bills had been passed with little trouble.

After the enacting clause of the third bill, which sought to limit cab licenses, was stricken, however, he withdrew a fourth measure to regulate barbering in the District.

The District Committee itself was split on the cab limitation bill. Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, ranking minority member, took the floor to oppose it, and Representatives Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, and Nichols aided in defeating it.

The motion to strike out the enacting clause was made by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana. He also sponsored the amendment to the liability insurance bill.

Dirksen assailed the Public Utilities Commission during his talk on the bill. The author of bills to bar one-man street cars and buses and limit traction fares to 7 cents, Dirksen charged the commission with being "monopolistic-minded."

He asserted the utilities body "constantly favors the Capital Transit Co." and appeared to disregard the wishes of Washington citizens as voiced by William McK. Clayton, veteran spokesman of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Congress was derelict, he said, in not appropriating money for the people's counsel's office, which has been vacant since the resignation of William A. Roberts.

"I wouldn't be so suspicious of the commission if the people had a representative there," he said.

Similar to NRA

O'Connor attacked the cab limitation bill on the ground it fostered a monopoly and was similar to the old NRA.

Representative Randloph (Democrat), of West Virginia, who handled the bill, pointed out, however, New York has a similar law. He also stated there are 5,493 cabs operating in Washington, or twice as many as are on the streets of Pittsburgh, Chicago and Philadelphia combined.

O'Connor charged the Metropolitan Police Department with laxity in enforcing parking regulations in suggesting traffic congestion might be alleviated by the abolition of "all-day and all-night" parking.

"I could take the chief of police and show him 2,000 cars violating the parking laws within a block of the Commerce Department," he said.

The real estate control bill passed by the House previously has passed the Senate, but at last session, and has been pending in the House for several sessions.

It provides for the licensing of all real estate brokers and salesmen in the District by a real estate commission.

Intended as a protection against fraud in the real estate business, the bill has the indorsement of the District Commissioners, the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Better Business Bureau.

The real estate commission is empowered to revoke licenses after proof in public hearing of fraudulent or either conduct prejudicial to the public interest.

Bitter Internal Dissension in Democrats' Ranks Provoked by Wide Range of Court Fight.

By Franklyn Waltman

Even though the Senate debate now raging over the President's Supreme Court reorganization program has shed little light on the merits of that particular proposition, it has been unusually and surprisingly illuminating on the cleavage within the Democratic Party.

WALTMAN.

Nominally the Senate is debating the question as to whether sound public policy requires the appointment of additional judges to the Supreme Court. Actually, two Democratic factions are engaged in a terrific, deadly struggle for their survival as political entities. So far the debate has been confined solely to the Democrats.

Thus, instead of a debate limited to the advantages or disadvantages of adding two, three or more justices to the Supreme Court, and the necessity or lack of necessity for such action, there is in the Senate a debate on the possibilities of a third term for Mr. Roosevelt; whether the President has the right to name his successor; whether the opponents of the court bill are true Democrats and whether Mr. Roosevelt is a true Democrat. Off the Senate floor this debate is discussed by Senators, not in view of how the outcome will affect the Supreme Court, but how the outcome will affect Mr. Roosevelt's popularity and prestige, the 1938 Congressional elections and, finally, the political situation in 1940.

Neither side takes the responsibility for the situation which has developed. The proponents of the President's program contend, as did Senator M. M. Logan, that the opponents are actuated by hatred of Mr. Roosevelt and actually are seeking to impair his prestige and destroy his influence within the party.

The opponents deny such accusations, pointing out that even such a warm, loyal personal friend of the President as Senator George L. Radcliffe could not on principle swallow the scheme and is among their number.

On the other hand the opponents give expression to their deep-seated fears—as asserted by Senator Patrick McCarran—that the New Dealers within the Democratic ranks are seeking to drive them out of the party by making their opposition appear black treason. In other words, they suspect that the prophecy of Dr. Stanley High in his Saturday Evening Post article of last fall that the party would be purged of its conservative elements is nearing fulfillment.

Meanwhile, close to the White House are New Dealers who are calling for such a purge. They severely assail anyone who has uttered a conciliatory word in this fight. They are chagrined that the President did not force the court fight to the Senate floor without compromise, and they contend Senate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson misled the President as to his strength on Capitol Hill.

Obviously there is no foundation for such a charge, and the fact that Mr. Roosevelt consented to the compromise indicates his distrust of such assertions. But such charges and recriminations have stirred up and kept swirling angry passions within the Democratic Party, and wounds are being inflicted that may not heal for many years, if at all.

Such observations are not Republican propaganda nor are they the figments of the imagination of Roosevelt "haters"—incidentally, in the eyes of certain New Dealers recently anyone who dares to oppose or criticize any Roosevelt policy, ipso facto becomes a "Roosevelt hater."

Such observations have come from men ardently supporting both the President and the New Deal. Such observations were made within the last week by Ulric Bell, veteran Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal, in an article he wrote for that newspaper. Mr. Bell is no reactionary, nor is he a fomenter of Democratic discord. There is no more ardent New Dealer in the corps of Washington correspondents. He is close to the White House. His newspaper, owned by the Roosevelt-appointed American Ambassador to Great Britain, approves all Mr. Roosevelt has done.

In an article discussing Senator Logan's charge conservative and other Democrats were using the court bill as a vehicle to break President Roosevelt's hold on the party, Mr. Bell asserted:

"What Mr. Logan says must suggest the Administration's position, until or unless it is repudiated. As it is, a Democratic Senator in charge of the President's judiciary bill, charges other Democratic Senators with trying to dynamite the President within the party. All the makings of a bitter and spectacular struggle are contained in the situation as it stands at the moment.

"There is little reason for believing that Mr. Roosevelt himself is not desirous of a party 'purge.' He has long realized that the political principles for which he stands have little in common with those of the reactionary groups which formerly commanded the party and which have been compelled under the New Deal to accept the Roosevelt leadership. Looking back to 1932, it was a belief widely expressed in New Deal circles then that the new dispensation and the old could not long share the same fold.

"If the court controversy now precipitates the long-gathering struggle, it will not end in the Senate, but will be carried into next year's Congressional elections. It has already wrought a wide schism in the party, but it may go further and serve as the means of realigning the major parties. Anti-New Deal spokesmen already are frankly urging Republicans to support anti-New Deal Democrats in 1938, and pro-Roosevelt Republicans are as manifestly indifferent to their old party label."

From the day Mr. Roosevelt projected his Supreme Court program, without prior consultation with any of his party leaders, the conductor of this column has questioned the sincerity of the entire undertaking. In this place that program has been suspected as a Machiavellian stroke on several occasions.

Whatever justification existed for the President's program at the time it was projected has disappeared since the Supreme Court decisions on the labor relations act and the social security taxes, and Justice Van Devanter's resignation. Yet Mr. Roosevelt has declined to abandon his proposal, even though it has created an ever-widening schism within his party. Can the Machiavellian purpose we long have suspected be to bring about such a rupture within the Democratic Party in order to "purge" it of every element not absolutely amenable to the Roosevelt will?

TVA Activities Called 'Utilities Persecution'

Atlanta, Ga., July 12 (U.P.).—Preston Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Co., said today the activities of the Tennessee Valley Authority amounted to "Federal persecution" of private utilities.

Arkwright made the charge when he appeared in answer to a rule nisi by the Georgia Public Service Commission, ordering the power company to show cause why its commercial rate structure should not be revised downward.

Mayor Phipps Renamed, 2-1, in Annapois Vote

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., July 12.—Democrats swept Mayor Louis N. Phipps into office again tonight with better than a 2-to-1 majority over his Republican opponent, Mrs. Mildred M. Clements, first woman in the city's history to seek the mayoralty.

Complete but unofficial returns from the eight precincts gave the Democratic incumbent 1,786 votes to 766 for Mrs. Clements. Democratic aldermen were elected in all but the Fourth Ward, where two colored Republicans were unopposed.

The voters ballotted overwhelmingly in favor of repealing the "blue laws" prohibitting motion pictures and dances on Sunday. The vote was for repeal, 1,269; against repeal, 538.

The aldermen elected were:

Fourth Ward—Charles A. Oliver and Charles L. Spriggs, Republicans (unopposed).

Balloting was quiet. Interest centered on the contest between Phipps and Mrs. Clements, wife of a Naval Academy mathematics instructor.

Sasscer to Run, Sun Says.

Baltimore, July 12 (AP).—The Sun says "closest associates" of State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer disclosed today the Prince Georges County legislator "has definitely decided to enter the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination."

Sasscer, president of the Senate, has been "conferring nearly every day with Democratic leaders of major or minor importance in practically every county in the State," the Sun says, and the conferences "have convinced Mr. Sasscer that he should contest the nomination with Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Mr. Herbert R. L. O'Conor . . . and anybody else who may enter the field."

The paper quotes Sasscer's "closest associates as saying the Baltimore mayor's early announcement for the 1938 gubernatorial race "has only resulted in further cementing the opposition forces to the mayor."

Duce Seeks Parley For World Peace

Rome, July 12 (AP).—Premier Mussolini today told George Lansbury, Laborite member of the British House of Commons, he was whole heartedly in favor of a world conference on peace, economic disarmament and limitation of armaments, but that the initiative for such a gathering must come from some one other than himself.

Lansbury, former leader of the Labor Party in Parliament, said Il Duce had told him emphatically Italy has not the slightest intention of interfering with the territorial integrity of Spain. Further, Mussolini said there was no issue between Italy and Britain in the Mediterranean which might bring them into conflict, he asserted.

Red Cross Boosts Funds for Spain

The Red Cross will begin immediately contributions of $2,500 a month for relief among both factions in Spain's civil war, Chairman Cary T. Grayson announced yesterday.

The money will be spent by the international committee of the Red Cross, with headquarters in Geneva. A staff of workers is being maintained in Spain by both the republican and the fascist forces.

Already the American Red Cross has contributed $57,000. Of this sum, $26,000 was used to repatriate American citizens, $26,000 sent to the international committee, and $5,000 to the French Red Cross for relief among Basque refugee children.

Dentists Urged to War On 'Socialized Medicine'

Atlantic City, N. J., July 12 (AP).—Members of the American Dental Association were called upon today to stand beside physicians in their opposition to "socialized medicine."

Dr. W. J. Carrington, president-elect of the Medical Society of New Jersey, addressing the dentists' annual convention, said some step was necessary to assure medical care to persons who cannot afford it, but warned so-called "State medicine" would strangle the health professions.

Generals Beam as House Military Affairs Committee Approves Army Housing Bill.

THE GENERALS felt better yesterday, just as the admirals' optimism increased last week. The House Military Affairs Committee voted out a bill which would authorize $21,460,688 worth of new housing and improvements at military posts, a few days after both houses had indorsed about $48,000,000 in new ships for the Navy.

Of the Army bill total, $3,312,300 would be spent in Hawaii, $3,067,800 in Panama. The largest amounts for projects in the United States are $2,880,000 for Chanute Field, Ill.; $2,275,000 for the Air Corps Technical school, Denver, Colo., and $1,770,000 for Fitzsimmons General Hospital, Colorado.

The measure would authorize the War Department to establish an extension of the Air Corps Technical School at Denver and to accept without cost to the Government about 960 acres of land on the outskirts of the city and land elsewhere in the State for a gunnery and bombing range for the Army Air Corps.

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN E. RANKIN (Democrat), of Mississippi, resumed his dynamiting of the utilities, with a statement announcing he has arranged for the House "public power bloc" to meet with David E. Lilienthal, TVA director, Saturday to protest against the TVA contract with the Arkansas Power & Light Co. The power bloc's personnel and strength remain undefined, but the membership, if it follows the views expressed by Rankin in his statement, is pretty bitter at the Electric Bond & Share Co. This firm is the holding company for the Arkansas utility, Rankin said. The former, he added, "is defying the law and refusing to register under the holding company act."

"Why should this contract be executed and the Electric Bond & Share Co. be permitted to profiteer by the sale of this power?" the Mississippian wondered rhetorically.

THE HOUSE postponed consideration of the bill which would give President Roosevelt six executive assistant because two interested Republican members were absent, but Chairman John J. Cochran, Missouri head of the reorganization committee in the House, said passage with little opposition is certain.

SENATOR OVERTON and Representative Maloney, Louisianans and Democrats both, taxied down to the White House to ask the President to open the Algiers, La., Navy Yard to capacity operation . . . Speaker Bankhead chose Representatives McReynolds, of Tennessee, and Merritt, of New York, as Democratic members of the New York World's Fair commission . . . The Senate wasted no time or words in confirming A. Manuel Fox, of New York, as a member of the Tariff Commission . . . Addition to Isle Royale National Park in Louisiana, of certain conservation and forestation lands was proposed in a bill offered by Chairman De-Rouen, of Louisiana, of the House Public Lands Committee . . . Calling, encouraging or participating in a strike would be outlawed under a bill sponsored by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan . . . Unification of laws governing sale of merchandise in interstate commerce was urged by Representative Chandler (Democrat), of Tennessee.

REPRESENTATIVE PATMAN (Democrat), of Texas, said the House Banking Committee had granted him a hearing, probably for next week, on his bill for Government ownership of Federal Reserve banks.

He expressed the opinion a majority of the House membership, including 160 of 327 Democrats, was behind the measure.

Patman contends enactment of the measure would save the Government considerable money. Federal Reserve banks now use Government credit to make profit for themselves, he said, and Government might as well take over operation of the banks.

Labor Pact Urged As Ship Lines' Need

By the Associated Press.

Officials close to Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, said last night Kennedy will insist shipping management and labor iron out differences before he approves subsidy grants.

These authorities represented Kennedy as believing it would be useless to ask Congress for appropritions for the merchant marine unless there were assurance labor disturbances would not interrupt service. The Maritime Commission will open the first of a series of hearings on seamen's wages, hours and working conditions in New York today.

Canterbury Hits Vatican Refusal Of Co-operation

Oxford, England, July 12 (AP).—The Archbishop of Canterbury, addressing the Universal Christian Council for Life and Works, deplored tonight the nonparticipation of the Roman Catholic Church in what he said were the council's efforts to form a united front for world Christianity.

"So long as the Church of Rome stands apart," said the Church of England's head, "there can be no full concentration of the forces of Christianity on the needs and problems of the present world."

Wood Pulp Plant Planned in Florida

Fernandina, Fla., July 12 (AP).—Mayor P. C. Kelly announced today work will begin immediately on a $6,000,000 plant for the manufacture of "high grade wood pulp" in Fernandina.

The Ranier Pulp & Paper Co., of Seattle, Wash., will establish a new plant, to be known as the Fernandina Pulp & Paper Co., Mayor Kelly said. Its capacity will be 180 tons daily.

Fernandina already has been selected as the site of a paper mill by the Kraft Corporation of America. That company is erecting a mill oosting about $6,000,000. Mayor Kelly said between 500 and 600 persons will be employed by the newest organization.

Mountain Climber Saved After Fall; Gravely Injured

Seattle, July 12 (AP).—Mountain climbers, risking a 1,600-foot plunge, today rescued Joseph G. Halwax, 28, from a ledge near the peak of 6,070-foot Mount Index and brought him to Seattle in a critical condition.

C. I. O. to Form Huge Union of State Workers

1,500,000-Member Goal to Include Municipal and County Employes.

Oganization of approximately 1,500,000 State, county and municipal employes with a "no strike, no picketing" edict, is the goal of a new union set up yesterday by John L. Lewis as head of the Committee for Industrial Organization. The union, known as the State, County and Municipal Workers of America, will be entirely separate from the recently created United Federal Workers of America for employes of the National Government.

Abram Flaxer, of New York, has been named executive vice president and has opened offices in the same building with C. I. O. headquarters here. He will be directing head of the union during the provisional period of its organization and will work directly under supervision of Lewis.

Unit to Leave A. F. of L.

Nucleus of the national union, it was said by C. I. O. officials, would be the 15,000 members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes which was reported leaving the American Federation of Labor to affiliate with the rival Lewis-controlled C. I. O. In addition, it was estimated there are some 5,000 members of other local unions on the Pacific Coast, in St. Louis and other cities who have petitioned the C. I. O. for affiliation.

The C. I. O. announcement said:

"Undoubtedly such an organization should promote a better understanding between the Government employes and the public, secure a higher standard of efficiency in service and provide adequate machinery for the adjustment of grievances or disputes within the limits of law and sound public policy."

Legislation Is Goal.

Following President Roosevelt's recent warning to Federal employes that there can be no strike against the National Government, the C. I. O. statement said:

"The general methods to be employed by this union in achieving its aim shall be that of legislation and education. The use of strikes or picketing by the union shall be deemed a violation of the policy of this organization."

A "vigorous" campaign of organization, financed "adequately" by the C. I. O., will be conducted, it was said. The C. I. O. will assign organizers to work under Flaxer's direction.

Police officers, military forces, firefighters, education workers, as well as executives with authority to hire and fire, are specifically exempted from possible membership. During the intensive organization drive there will be no initiation fee but membership dues will be $1 a month, "properly distributed" between the local union and the national office.

To Set Up State Units.

The tax paid to the national office shall be used later for setting up State organizations, adjustment of grievances and for "educational and organizing" purposes.

Save where local situations made it impractical, one local charter shall be granted all municipal employes in a city, another charter to all county employes in the city and another to all the State employes in the city. All such local organizations throughout a State would become part of a State-wide organization at the discretion of national officers.

Flaxer attended the College of the City of New York and Columbia University and has a B. S. degree from the former. He organized a union of city employes in New York and became its president and full-time general manager after having the union affiliated with the A. F. of L. At the first convention of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes he was elected vice president of the national organization.

Defense of the C. I. O., meanwhile, was voiced in the House by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), California, who said it was ridiculous to accuse "the hundreds of thousands of members of the C. I. O. of communism."

On the other hand, Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, foe of the C. I. O., introduced a resolution making it unlawful for any person or group to influence a strike among Federal employes. It provides fines and imprisonment for violation.

C. I. O. Affiliation Studied.

New York, July 12 (AP).—Two committees, representing at the outset diametrically opposed viewpoints, met here today to discuss possible affiliation of the International Longshoremen's Union on the East Coast with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

2 Die, 15 Hurt At Reopening of Republic Plant

C. I. O. Offices at Massillon Closed by Police After Bloody Riot.

By the Associated Press.

Massillon, O., July 12—Police and National Guardsmen closed C. I. O. headquarters today and prohibited the formation of picket lines in the wake of a clash between police and strikers which killed 2 men and injured 15, including 3 patrolmen.

National Guardsmen stood watch over the union building, from which police tear gas, backed up by firing from a submachine gun, had forced all C. I. O. adherents.

Frank Hardesty, subregional director of John L. Lewis' steel union, declared the "shooting and murder" were "part of a premeditated plan to shoot down innocent workers to inspire terror." He asserted foremen of the Republic Steel Corporation, which has a plant 500 yards from the union headquarters, participated in the shooting; Republic spokesmen said none of its employes had participated.

The clash brought to 15 the death total of the strike, called by the union May 26 in an effort to obtain signed bargaining contracts from independent steel companies. It came as Republic was reopening the last of its strike-closed plants, and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. was arranging to reopen tomorrow its Indiana Harbor, Ind., works, employing 7,700.

J. C. Argetsinger, Sheet & Tube vice president, today asked Indiana's ov. M. Clifford Townsend for National Guardsmen to protect returning workers, but Gov. Townsend replied there was "no need for State protection" because "all pickets are now withdrawn."

This interchange followed Gov. Townsend's announcement Sunday the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee had agreed to permit workers to return to their jobs under a labor policy outlined by Sheet & Tube. Argetsinger responded "there has been no settlement between the company and the S. W. O. C." and reiterated the company would "make no agreement, written or otherwise," with the union.

Production Gains 15.4 Points.

Republic units at Pittsburgh and Canton, Ohio, were reopened without disorder today, and the American Iron & Steel Institute reported national steel production gained 15.4 points last week to 82.7 per cent of capacity.

The Massillon fighting brought gunshot death to Flugencio Calzada, 27, a former Republic employe, identified from a passport as having come to the United States from Spain about 1934; and Nick Valdos, 45, whom police had been unable to identify.

James Calhoun and Tillman Allen, two of a contingent of patrolmen from nearby Conton called by Massillon police to provide reinforcements, were gassed. Patrolman Royal Smith, of Massillon, fractured his arm, and a National Guardsman suffered a thumb injury. The others injured, several of whom suffered gunshot wounds, were strikers or strike sympathizers.

141 Arrested.

Police arrested 141 persons, charging them with disorderly conduct or holding them on open charges pending further inquiry.

H. O. Curley, former Army major assisting Police Chief Stanley Switter during the steel strike, said he had 20 men near the union headquarters before the fighting broke out. He reported a revolver was fired five times from the union building, and his own men thereupon, without an order from him, began returning the fire.

Maj. Curley said his men shot tear gas into the building and fired a submachine gun over the heads of the 400 persons he estimated were on the scene. He reported his men drove the union adherents several blocks from the building, and that his group was fired upon mysteriously by two machine guns.

Harold J. Ruttenberg, research director for the S. W. O. C., gave this version of the clash:

"Special deputies, city police and armed gunmen of Republic Steel, several of whom are foremen in the mill, opened without cause, bullet, buckshot and tear gas fire upon a crowd of pickets outside of union headquarters in Columbiana Heights.

"Let's Bust Them Up."

"Prior to the first shot that was fired I saw and heard three deputies tell a motorist to turn his lights off, which he did. Then I heard a deputy say, 'Let's bust them up.' Then I heard shots and smelled tear gas."

Ruttenberg said the police group "opened fire without provocation." Hardesty, subregional S. W. O. C. director, telegraphed Chairman La Follette of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee:

"This shooting and murder was planned and executed as part of a premeditated plan to shoot down innocent workers to inspire terror in them and others. . . .

"We can supply you with the names of some Republic Steel foremen who participated in the shooting."

Capt. Wyman, Navy Veteran, Dies at Home

Officer Commanded Ship Which Brought Back Unknown Soldier's Body.

Capt. Henry L. Wyman, U. S. Navy, died at his home, 3612 Newark street, yesterday. Until June 4, when he retired from active service, Capt. Wyman had been on duty in the shore establishments division.

During the World War, Capt. Wyman served at the Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N. H., and in December, 1919, he took command of the U. S. S. Olympia. While under his command the Olympia made the cruise to Europe to bring home the body of the Unknown Soldier.

Born in Evanston, Ill., December 13, 1878, Capt. Wyman was appointed to Annapolis in 1895. During the Spanish-American War he served on the U. S. S. Columbia. He also served in the Mexican campaign.

From 1922 until 1925, Capt. Wyman was on duty in the Bureau of Engineering, and then commanded the U. S. S. Denver, which operated in Nicaraguan waters in 1926 and 1927, during the insurrection there.

After graduating from the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., in 1928, Capt. Wyman entered Harvard University Graduate School and was one of the first naval officers to complete the international law course. While in command of the U. S. S. Idaho, the following year, Capt. Wyman was instrumental in maintaining an excellent gunnery record for his ship.

A holder of the Spanish Campaign Medal, the Philippine Medal, the Cuban Pacification Medal, and the Mexican Service Medal, Capt. Wyman also received the Navy Cross for services in Nicaragua.

Capt. Wyman is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Myers Wyman, and two daughters, Mrs. Rawson Bennett and Miss Margaret Wyman. Funeral services will be held tomorrow in the Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral, followed by burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Jurors Brought From Streets and Fields For Prince Georges Bonding Racket Trial

proached last night, Sheriff Bell and his assistants went out into the streets of Upper Marlboro, nearby farms and local stores, summoning scores of prospective jurors.

Most of them were in shirtsleeves, but precedent requires that they wear coats in the presence of the Court. To comply with this requirement, court bailiffs stood in the corridors with coats in their arms. One burly fellow couldn't squeeze into the skimpy coat he was given and had to throw it over his shoulders.

All but one of the defendants were present for the opening of their trials. Howard Slater, one of the former policemen, is ill, but his counsel consented to his being tried with the others.

The other defendants are Herbert J. Moffat, a former justice of the peace at Hyattsville; Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, of Suitland, Md., and Albert Anderson, Warren Peake, Claude Reese, Arthur Brown, Maurice Hampton and Frank Bell, all former members of the county police force.

Ten Jurors Seated.

The ten jurymen selected were William McQueeney, of Takoma Park, decorator; George E. D. C. Pool Record Broken Last Week

Fifty-two thousand person used the six swimming pools of the Office of National Capital Parks last week, establishing a new record, Superintendent O. Marshall Finnan announced yesterday.

More than half the total—27,000—swam without charge, taking advantage of the free periods, Finnan said.

Most heavily patronized, with 12,000 swimmers each, were the new East Potomac Park pool and the one at Takoma Recreation Center.

Previous record for one week was 40,000, but this was made last summer when only four parks pools were in operation.

France Is to Suspend International Patrol on Her Spanish Frontier Today

Promises Ban On Arms, Men To War Zone

Foreign Observers to Go as French Resume Full Control.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 12.—The French government was ready tonight to suspend international supervision of her Spanish border at noon tomorrow.

The foreign office announced that since Portugal had made no move to re-establish international control of her Spanish frontier, France would remove facilities for the foreign observers who had been stationed on her boundary.

The observers had been posted both in France and Portugal by the 27-nation neutrality committee in an effort to keep foreign men and arms from going to Spain. Portugal, friendly to the insurgents, recently refused to permit the foreign agents to continue their duties.

The French government, sympathetic with the Spanish government, announced the observers on her border would be allowed to remain there if they desired, but their tasks would be carried out by Frenchmen only. France said, however, the frontier would continue closed to foreign volunteers and war materials.

The French decision, announced in advance to the neutrality committee last week, left Great Britain, a leader in the nonintervention movement, to provide some scheme for isolating the Spanish struggle which would be acceptable to Italy and Germany on the one side and France and Great Britain on the other.

Britain Plans Compromise.

London, July 12 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today the British Government would present a new plan for keeping the Spanish war within bounds to the 27-nation nonintervention committee this week.

Eden's plan was expected to be a compromise between the hitherto opposed Anglo-French and Italo-German viewpoints on the problem of controlling the flow of arms and men to the Spanish civil war.

The foreign secretary also told the House that Britain has protested to Italy against charges in Italian newspapers that the British government has intervened in the war on behalf of the Spanish government.

Yesterday Eden, on a week-end cruise off northern France, outlined his nonintervention plan to Sir Eric Phipps, ambassador to France, for presentation to the French government. Diplomats said it provided for temporary re-establishment of the naval patrol, with Italian and German observers aboard French and British warships, pending a permanent control scheme.

Fresh from his cruise, the foreign secretary demanded that Parliament give him a free hand to deal with the Spanish crisis.

Orangeman Warns Irish on Charter

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 12 (AP).—Viscount Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, seized the occasion of the 247th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne today to warn the Irish Free State to "cease interfering" with the protestant six counties of the north.

His remarks were considered to refer to the constitution, framed by President Eamon De Valera, recently adopted by the Irish Free State. That charter, providing for complete separation from Great Britain, envisages ultimate reunion of the Free State with Ulster.

Arabs Threaten Boycott of Britain

Jerusalem, July 12 (AP).—Arabs and Jews took new steps today in opposition to the British plan for carving Palestine into three parts.

One hundred and fifty religious leaders issued a decree threatening excommunication for any Moslem who supported partition of the country. Other Arabs were understood to be discussing the prospects of an anti-British boycott from the Mediterranean to the Indian Ocean if the British plan is carried out.

The British proposed Palestine be divided into an Arab state, a Jewish state and a British mandated area. The Jewish Labor Council, after a three-day session, reiterated objections to the plan.

Battles Raging Around Madrid To Decide War

Rebels Forced to Halt Drive in North; Casualty Toll Set at 14,000.

By the Associated Press.

Salamanca, Spain, July 12.—A bitter struggle that may be the climax of the civil war, insurgent officers declared tonight, is being waged on the Madrid front.

They said it has forced into temporary, perhaps permanent, discard an insurgent plan to sweep Spain's northwest ledge through Santander and then mass forces for an offensive against main government strongholds, Madrid, Barcelona and Valencia.

The government forces, insurgent commanders said, evidently have chosen to fight it out now where they are strongest, on the Madrid front in central Spain, and Generalissimo Franco's troops are accepting the challenge.

Despite the government forces' preliminary advantages in their thrust westward from Madrid in a salient to Brunete, the insurgent officers asserted the battle lines now are fairly well drawn and where the insurgents prefer them, outside the capital itself.

Loss of life, their communiques report, has been heavy in fierce attacks and counterattacks that have marked a week of almost incessant fighting.

Airplane concentrations on the Madrid front were reported virtually completed. Insurgent officials said the fighting machines centered there almost exhaust the supply available to both sides.

After absorbing the shock of the first government attacks, Gen. Franco's lieutenants ordered thousands of reinforcements, artillery and tanks to the front to launch a counter-offensive. Insurgents said the government attack had been awaited, but its ferocity surprised them.

Loyal Air Fleet Used.

Madrid, July 12 (AP).—Spanish government forces, consolidating their 100-square-mile bite into the insurgent front west of Madrid, fought today with their great fleet of aerial bombers.

The planes droned over the battlefields to subject insurgents to the heaviest raid of the year-long war.

Insurgent air forces retaliated with attacks upon the Brunete-Quijorna sector—outposts of the government's new drive intended to raise the seige of Madrid.

Paris Hotel Employes Will 'Intensify' Strike

Paris, July 12 (AP).—Striking Paris hotel workers decided at a mass meeting today to "intensify" their demand for a 40-hour week as the third day of the strike saw an estimated 40,000 workers idle.

The meeting criticized Premier Camille Chautemps, charging "the bovernment abandoned neutrality in favor of employers" when it brought about a 5½-day week agreement July 2.

U. S. Mediation Sought to Aid Jews in Poland

Prominent orthodox Jews, representing the American Jewish Congress, visited Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday to ask friendly United States intervention for Polish Jewry.

The delegation, headed by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, presented a memorandum summarizing the discrimination and actual persecution the Jews have suffered at the hands of the Polish government. In addition, Dr. Wise brought up the subject of Britain's partition of Palestine but refused to discuss Secretary Hull's opinion on the matter.

Hull expressed sympathy for the plight of Poland's Jewish and promised to study the data contained in the memorandum. According to Representative Henry Ellenbogen, of Pennsylvania, a member of the delegation, Congress favors intercession by the United States.

While the delegation was visiting Secretary Hull, nearly 200 additional members of the American Jewish Congress, representing 14 States, met in executive session and planned a program of assistance for their fellow Jews.

The congress believes United States intercession is justified "in view of recognized principles of international law" and "of the diplomatic history of the United States which reveals it as the consistent champion of the rights of humanity throughout the world."

preparations. Independent members of Parliament indorsed their action.

A war office announcement heavy Chinese reinforcements had reached the Peiping region from the south and had fired on the Japanese in the Yungting area made the outlook ominous. The war office declared this brought China-Japan relations to the breaking point.

(Peiping dispatches made no mention of the arrival of fresh Chinese troops. Those mentioned by Tokyo may have been the vanguard of 50,000 men of the central government's crack divisions which Nanking Sunday reported moving north along the Peiping-Hankow Railway.)

Japan maintains that by terms of a military agreement reached at Peiping in 1935 troops of the central Chinese government must remain outside the Peiping-Tientsin area.

London, July 12 (AP).—Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, told the House of Commons today Britain probably would exchange views with the United States concerning the Japan-China conflict in North China.

He said Britain earnestly desired "there should be a settlement not only of the present dispute but also of all difficulties existing generally between China and Japan."

Hull Cautions Japan, China Against War

Talks With Two Envoys, Urges 'Cause of Peace, World Progress.'

By Franklyn Waltman.

Through Secretary of State Cordell Hull, the United States Government yesterday took steps to caution Japan and China against engaging in another armed conflict as a result of the skirmishing which has taken place in North China.

Secretary Hull expressed this Government's attitude personally to Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito and Zaung Teh Ing, counselor of the Chinese Embassy, in two separate calls which the Far Eastern diplomats made on him yesterday.

Several hours after the two diplomats visited Secretary Hull, the State Department issued the following statement:

The Japanese Ambassador and the Counselor of the Chinese Embassy each called at the Department this morning and communicated information in regard to events in North China. In the course of the conversations which ensued both were given expression of the view that an armed conflict between Japan and China would be a great blow to the cause of peace and world progress."

This action was similar to that taken by Secretary Hull after the bombing of the German battleship Deutschland more than a month ago, when Hull informed both the German and Spanish Ambassadors this Government hoped that the incident might be adjusted without further conflict.

On leaving the State Department Ambassador Saito said he had given the Secretary of State information regarding the developments in North China which had been sent to him by his foreign office. He said Japan was anxious to localize the trouble in North China.

Meanwhile the Chinese embassy issued a statement charging the Japanese had sent reinforcements into the disputed area and had an additional reserve of 20,000 troops ready at Fengtai railway junction.

"It is obvious," the statement said, "that the Japanese are carrying out a premeditated plan with the sole object of making North China a second Manchuria."

Secretary Hull, at his press conference, said he had no information regarding reports from London that Anthony Eden, British foreign minister, might initiate consultations among the powers signatory to the Washington pacts dealing with the Far East and the maintenance of the status quo in China.

The Secretary of State, in reply to questions, said that whether the American neutrality act might be invoked against Japan and China, thereby placing an embargo on arms shipments to those countries, would depend on developments.

Meanwhile, it was announced at the Treasury papers had been signed completing the agreement reached last week between Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and Chinese Finance Minister H. H. Kung. Under this agreement the United States will sell "a substantial amount" of gold to China and will purchase from that government a quantity of silver. The purpose of the plan is to increase the stability of the Chinese monetary structure and to give stability to foreign exchange transactions between the two countries.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC and of the Export-Import Bank, also revealed that before Dr. Kung left Washington over the week-end they had discussed plans for the financing of Chinese purchases of railroad and textile equipment in this country. Jones said that in all probability an arrangement would be worked out whereby the Export-Import Bank would make credit advances to finance in part such orders.

Davies Watches Review of 100,000 Soviets in Shorts

Moscow, July 12 (AP).—United States Ambassador Joseph E. Davies witnessed his first Red Square spectacle today as 100,000 scantily clad men and women athletes paraded past Josef Stalin in the annual physical culture parade.

One group of men in the colorful pageant, heads shaved bald, wore only blue trunks and tennis shoes and another passed the reviewing stand with 25 big eagles atop their heads.

The marchers wheeled campfires, basketball courts, soccer fields, swimming tanks, toboggan slides, boxing rings, maypoles and running tracks across Red Square and the expanse suddenly blossomed with a mass of running and jumping figures playing dozen of games at once.

The Soviet Polar expedition was depicted in a great float carried by 1,000 athletes. Another represented a 100-foot military tank made of flowers.

King George Honors Veteran Rail Engineer

London, July 12 (AP).—Tom Clarke, veteran engineer of the train, "Coronation Scot," brought the King and Queen into Euston Station today.

"Come on, Tom," Sir Josiah Stamp, chairman of the railroad, called to him. "The King has something for you."

Clarke, 48 years with the railroad, hastily put on a clean pair of overalls, wiped his botts and walked to the King's compartment. There, from His Majesty's hands, the engineer received the medal of the Order of the British Empire for "meritorious service."

French to Honor 3d Division Dead

The battle, which lasted three days, will be commemorated in Washington at a convention of 1,000 survivors. Mrs. Joanna Thorp, of Irvine, Ky., who lost a son in the struggle, will place a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb Friday at 11 a. m. July 15 is a national holiday in France.

King Foresees Early Passage Of Airport Bill

Senator King, while originally favorable to splitting the cost between the District and Federal governments, stated his ultimate opinion would depend upon whether the port is to be a purely National institution or a National-municipal flying field.

If the Camp Springs site is to be used for the development of a National airport that would rival or excel the aviation centers of European capitals, he said, the Federal Government should bear the cost.

Nichols, although he did not sign the commission report because it failed to recommend an auxiliary airport for use in short-haul traffic, said he would favor placing the Camp Springs site under Federal control and developing it entirely as a Federal agency.

City Field Local Problem.

Should the District, however, find it needs a municipal airport closer to the city, he added, that should be developed as a District airport wholly at the expense of Washington taxpayers.

Mrs. Norton said she favors construction of a National airport that will meet the needs of the Capital for years to come.

"The District of Columbia certainly shouldn't have to bear any of the cost of such an airport," she said.

Palmisano expressed a similar view.

The commission estimated the cost of acquiring the land and developing an adequate airport at Camp Springs at $3,286,250.

This was the lowest figure for any of the nine major sites considered. The others were: The Washington-Hoover Airport, $4,672,000; Gravelly Point, $4,746000; Hybla Valley $3,396,250; Fort Hunt, Va., $4,653,750; Suitland Md., $5,619,125; Forestville, Md., $5,302,000; Oakland, Md. $5,556,875, and Silver Hill, Md., $5,048,125.

Camp Springs has 1,900 acres for the flying field, the report disclosed.

"Camp Springs is on some of the highest ground in the vicinity," it added, "thus it offers excellent drainage as well as being free from river fogs. It is the largest extent of level high ground within miles of Washington, thus reducing to a minimum the grading and filling necessary in the development of the airport, and as a consequence the ultimate cost."

Free of Hazards.

"The surrounding territory is free of industrial and residential development as well as natural hazards, more so than any other site inspected, thus making its safety factors for blind flying very high.

"The land is relatively undeveloped, consisting of for the most part scrub timber of young growth, thus reducing the cost below surrounding land that is now under cultivation.

"It is accessible to the city on good roads within 10.2 miles of the Willard Hotel. All facilities are available without undue cost except railroad connections, which latter the commission does not believe to be essential.

"Options have been secured on most of the parcels of land comprising the site. Included in the area is a small tract of land owned by the Bureau of Standards, which would be acquired in the development of the site."

Options were secured secretly without the employment of Government agents as buyers.

The commission, in urging that "necessary funds be appropriated at the earliest possible moment," added that "conclusive action be not delayed as the continued use of the present airport is, in the frank opinion of the members, inviting disaster."

Express Highway Urged.

The report recommended that in authorizations and appropriations that "provisions be made for the construction of a suitable express highway from the airport to the bridge over the Anacostia River."

It concludes, without comment, that testimony was submitted to the commission "that in addition to an airport, such as was contemplated by the act creating the commission, an auxiliary airport would prove advantageous."

This was the position taken by Nichols and Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, in declining to sign the report.

The commission rejected both the Washington-Hoover Airport and Gravelly Point, which have long been storm centers of District airport debate and legislation.

The Arlington County Chamber of Commerce last night voted to ask the county board to use its influence to retain Washington Airport as the principal landing field for the Capital after Samuel Solomon, manager of the airport, predicted the field would continue to handle most of the city's air traffic regardless of what is done to develop another airport.

Solomon said the airport company had plans for an "adequate" substitute for Military road which, cutting across the airport's only runway, has provided the field with its most frequently complained of hazard.

New Site "Inconvenient."

The site selected by the commission, Solomon said, would make an ideal airport from every standpoint but convenience. This factor, he predicted, would make Washington Airport the city's principal landing field.

The chamber received from the Arlington County Lions Club a letter asking its co-operation to forestall abandonment of the airport.

"Washington-Hoover at best," the report stated, "if the land now belonging to the Department of Agriculture's experimental farms and the fill in the boundary channel were included, could not exceed 219½ acres.

"In addition, it lies at the bottom of a hill, and on the southeast is an industrial area. To the west also are the Arlington radio towers, the tops of which are 800 feet above the field. Not far to the northeast is the Washington Monument. The field has been flooded under periods of unusual high water and is subject to river fogs. To overcome flooding would require considerable fill. Five thousand foot runways are not possible in all directions."

One Basic Requirement.

"Certainly, Washington Airport does not fulfill any of the basic requirements except its proximity to the city and, as the commission has previously stated, the safety factor should be stressed at the expense of the convenience factor.

"In the case of Gravelly Point, it is proposed to develop a site by fill. The commission is of the opinion that the general experience and similar developments is an excellent indication of what may be expected in the present instance.

"Any fill, unless built up with carefully selected materials at a very high cost, requires years to settle sufficiently to provide a good base for the purpose intended. Thus it believes that construction could not be started until at least two years after the fill at Gravelly Point is completed.

"Further, similar objections raised with reference to Washington-Hoover have application here, except that the available area would consist of 500 acres."

"It immediately became apparent," the report stated, "that engineering development of aircraft was rapidly outdistancing ground facilities, that is to say that the distance required for take off and landing of our largest planes and the angle of ascent and glide had become of such an order as to preclude the use of airports that but a few years ago were considered ample for any contingency. And the end is not yet in sight, for even now airplanes are being projected that are more than twice the size of present aircraft."

Close-in Airports Outmoded.

"In most cases the early proponents of municipal airports attempted to locate them as close to the cities which they served as was possible. With older, slower type ships and no attempt to maintain schedules in bad weather, and with generally poor road communications, this was indubitably the ideal situation. But for the same reason that the small airport is outmoded, the airport at the gates of a city has become dangerous.

"The commission is well aware that scheduled transport operations are being conducted from this type of field with only minor accidents, but they are convinced that no serious, impartial student of the situation will contend that the danger of an appalling accident is not imminent.

"With these thoughts in mind the sub-committee laid down the following requirements for a modern airport:

"1. That runways at least 5,000 feet long on the major points of the compass with provision for blind landing runways and unobstructed approach two miles long, parallel to the direction of bad weather winds (for blind landings).

"2. That it be located in an area which permits of expansion.

"3. That it be free from obstructions, positively from buildings, towers, stacks and similar types of construction, and as much as possible from natural hazards.

"4. That the land selected should be relatively flat, with firm soil, good drainage and preferably high.

"5. That the cost of the land and its preparation be neither exorbitant or unreasonable.

"6. That it be convenient to the City of Washington, which it is to serve, and that a suitable express highway connecting the two be considered in the cost of the entire project.

"7. That it be as free from the disadvantages of local area fog prevalence as other circumstances will permit.

"In all, 49 sites were investigated. Each site was inspected from the air and on the ground."

T. Wheeler, of Montana, said his mail was heavy and it was all running against the bill.

Before debate opened, the judiciary committee in executive session considred pending Constitutional amendments. The amendment of Senator Charles O. Andrews, of Florida, for an 11-judge court. He declared it would be retire at 75, was discussed. No action was taken.

Burke to Push Amendment.

The committee will meet again next Monday, when Burke will seek action on his own amendment, compelling retirement of justices at 75, but exempting the present court. He declared it would ge germane as a substitute for the court bill.

As the day closed, the Senate line-up on the Administration compromise appeared to be: "For bill, 42; against the bill, 44; doubtful, 10."

Yesterday's angry exchange between O'Mahoney and Robinson was precipitated by efforts to introduce a New Deal farm aid bill, and to call up the War Department conference report.

For the third successive day, Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, had attempted to put in the farm bill, and Senator George McGill, of Kansas, has interceded for him. Retaliating against the strict rules imposed by Robinson, opponents had objected to every unanimous consent request. Again yesterday, Senator William H. King, of Utah, objected.

War Report Blocked.

Then Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, tried to call up the War Department conference report. O'Mahoney objected. He said he did so to point out that "responsibility for preventing the ordinary operation of the Senate" lay in the leadership's refusal to adjourn to take up other business, and in the imposition of "'gag" rules.

"If the Senate were permitted to discuss this measure in the ordinary manner, in less than two weeks this proposal would be blown out of the water and there would not be anybody upon the floor with courage enough to stand up and defend it," said O'Mahoney.

In permitting other measures to come up, O'Mahoney said opponents would be accepting "a limitation of debate, and allow those who are employing the tactics of the steamroller to close debate upon us." He slashed at the rule limiting Senators to two speeches on any one question.

"Is that the rule for a Democratic assembly?" he asked. "Ah, Mr. President, it is typical of the measure which is being presented to us. Force to the judiciary! Force to the Senate!"

Robinson Stirred.

In the end, O'Mahoney withdrew his objection to consideration of the War Department bill, but the objection was renewed by Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary. McNary will make the first Republican speech against the bill today or tomorrow, discussing it from "the farm angle."

Discussing the bill, section by section, O'Mahoney denied the New Deal, the 1940 election, the President's record, or any "personal" issue was involved.

Cites British System.

"The issue is whether or not we are going to adopt a system for the judiciary vastly different from anything that has ever existed in the history of our Government," he said.

He contended the measure should be called "a bill to centralize the administration of justice." He said it permitted "transporting" of judges into other districts than their own, just as litigants were "transported" before strange judges under the British system. He said it was this sort of thing the constitutional fathers sought to guard against.

O'Mahoney questioned use of "discretionary" phraseology in the bill, permitting the President to use his own judgment whether to appoint or not to appoint a new justice. He charged the intent was "to permit appointments to accumulate," with a "threat that the Supreme Court will be expanded if they make decisions that are not satisfactory to the Executive." He said it was to be a "club" held constantly over the court.

A quorum call preceded Bailey's address. The North Carolinian opened with a warning that "no compromise can be accepted that is tainted with any implication of Congressional or Presidential or special control of the judiciary."

Promises Fight to End.

"We are here," said Bailey, "and we are going to be heard. We are going to prolong the debate until the American people understand what is on foot and the reason that we stand as we do. If that takes all summer, we may take the motto of Ulysses Grant and 'fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.' We intend that the truth shall be told and America shall be informed."

Bailey said an increase in the size of the court was proposed, "not in aid of the courts, not because judges are old, not because dockets are congested, but to add to them in order to affect judicial determination."

"It is said that to do it in a little way, and year by year, will not be such a grave matter," said the Senator. "Commit murder on that basis, by slow poison or swift assassination, and see how quickly you get electrocuted."

He said the original arguments for the bill were merely "pretexts" and now they "do not even have the status of pretexts." He said the real purpose was to "control the courts," and in that sense the bill is "unconstitutional."

"Lay your hands upon the judicial power," warned Bailey, "undertake to create a court that will find the Constitution to mean what you want it to mean, or that will administer injunctive relief as you want it, and I tell you you have violated your oath of office.

"You have transgressed upon the judicial power. You have assumed the function of a judge of the judges. You have put yourselves above the courts and the Constitution."

"Does the Senator not realize," asked Robinson, "that there is nothing unreasonable about that rule, particularly in view of the fact that when a Senator takes the floor to make either one of those speeches, he may speak as long as he pleases on any subject that he chooses, and nobody but Almighty God can interfere with him over his objection?"

Under his own interpretation of the rules, Robinson was forced to address the Senate by questions put to O'Mahoney. As he continued to speak, Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, protested Robinson was out of order. "He is not asking a question. He is making a speech and an argument."

O'Mahoney also objected, as Robinson continued posing his questions, designed to show that strict rules were enforced only after court bill opponents made "speeches" during the time of other Senators.

Asks Limit on Questions.

"The Senator has asked several questions, and I wish to know how many he may ask without taking me off the floor," said O'Mahoney.

"The Senator may stop me from asking a question if he knows he cannot answer me," retorted Robinson.

"I can answer the Senator here or anywhere else," snapped O'Mahoney.

"Oh, well, here is the place to answer," shot back Robinson. "We do not have to go outside to do it."

"Not you and I," smiled O'Mahoney.

At one point, Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, Robinson's assistant, asked if O'Mahoney would agree to a vote on the bill on September 17, "which is the anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution. O'Mahoney said he could not enter an agreement on behalf of the other opponents.

In a radio address last night, Senator Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico, originator of the substitute plan, said "evil forces of hatred, suspicion and distrust" have been loosed in the Senate debate, causing "unwarranted fears and apprehension" to the people.

He said the substitute provided "a much needed reform" and would not endanger the independence of the judiciary. Hatch declared the purpose in limiting appointments to the court to one a year was "to make the plan safe so that no executive may ever use his power for the purpose of so-called 'packing' the court."

"There is no thought," Hatch said, "of compelling retirement. A younger man will be appointed to the court, not to supplant the aged justice, simply a younger man appointed as any other justice of the Supreme Court is appointed to carry his full share of duties and responsibilities of that high office, thus lifting in some degree and measure, the heavy load of responsibility which rests upon the shoulders of the older judge."

Jamboree Cleanup to Start As Last Scouts Leave Capital

Job of Removing Tent City to Last Until September; Only Stragglers Remain in D. C.; Huge Profits for City Revealed.

All was quiet along the Potomac yesterday as the last Boy Scout departed from Washington's suburban tent towns. Now the cleanup work will begin, and it won't be finished until the latter part of September.

"We've been set up as examples of good campers; now we've got to prove it," said Ray Bryan, in charge of Scout construction headquarters on Route 1, near the airport.

Getting rid of the deserted villages will be as big a job as assembling them. First an Army liaison officer must inspect every one of the 5,000 Army tents still standings. If he finds any damages, the Boy Scouts must pay for it. The same goes for dishes or other gear loaned by the Army. All canvas will be down by August 1.

Cost $900,000.

The Jamboree cost the Scouts about $900,000. Funds were raised by a head charge of $25 per boy and scoutmaster. It was learned yesterday handsome profits were made by the organization trading posts. One tent alone took in $150,000. There was 20 such tents.

Cleaning up will start with removal of thousands of cots, mattresses and other equipment. Then tents will start coming down, to be packed away at Army posts nearby. Then rehabilitation of lawns will start, not to be ended until the destroyed acres are reseeded in September.

A sale of salvaged materials will begin at construction headquarters Monday, and will include lumber, tables, cooking gear, shower-houses, etc.

Huge Profit for D. C.

Financially, the organization will break about even on its 11-day party, which did not cost the District or Federal governments anything. Washington made a large profit on it, final figures indicated. The Scouts spent over $750,000 here. On top of that, relatives visiting them spent large amounts. Railroad officials yesterday said the train influx during the Jamboree surpassed the all-time highs marked up during the World War.

Only a handful of stragglers remained in town yesterday. They were Scouts who had friends living in the city. Some of the boys at the encampment wil be moving to Holland soon for the World Jamboree. Harvey Gordon, who built the Scout city here, leaves today to supervise construction of the camp there.

President Kills Bill to Extend Farmer Loans

to drought; or against the equally great danger of low prices."

Saying he believed the cost of the proposed farm program can be kept in line with the Government's fiscal program by integrating it with existing programs in such a way as to avoid additional expenditures for the fiscal year, he concluded:

"If we wait until next year the ultimate objective will be the same but we may be faced with emergency conditions which would make the legislative and administrative problem more difficult because of the very fact of moving hurriedly under the first of an emergency."

The House may act today on the veto of the farm loan interest bill. Chairman Jones saying he wanted time to consult members of the committee as to whether he should introduce a motion to override the veto; obtained permission from Speaker Bankhead to delay action until today.

Passed in Face of Protests.

The measure was passed in the face of "disturbed" protests from the White House and the Farm Credit Administration. It would extend for one year the present curtailed rate of 3½ per cent interest required of borrowers from the Federal Land Banks. Then, for an additional year the rate would be set at 4 per cent. The rate on private loans refinanced by the land banks in 1933 and later, was 6.3 per cent.

The President pointed out, therefore, that farmers who converted their private loans into 5 per cent land bank bonds cut their annual charges more than 20 per cent, while those who refinanced later at 4 per cent obtained a permanent reduction of more than 40 per cent. The President said he believed, in view of these facts, "that there is no justification for continued Government subsidy of Federal Land Bank interest rates below the unprecedently low rates these banks are now offering farmer-borrowers on a business basis."

He added that "the ability of farmers to pay interest at the rates provided for in their mortgages with the Federal Land Banks has been very substantially improved, due to an increase of more than 100 per cent in the level of farm prices since the emergency period of 1932-33."

He said the low interest provisions would require the Treasury to pay a total of $52,900,000 in the two years, constituting "a gift to individual borrowers from the Federal Treasury."

The bill would further reduce to 4 per cent the 5 per cent interest charged on loans made by the land bank commissioner, loans which are on second mortgages and in which there are "added factors of risk." The proposed interest cut would reduce the annual income of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, which owns these loans, by approximately $8,350,000, the President said, and would place the corporation "in such a position that there is a definite possibility that it may not be able to meet its obligations from its own income."

Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the farmers' organization, said the purpose of the vetoed legislation is to prevent farm owners from slipping into the tenant class.

He added, in letters sent to every member of Congress, that 735,000 farmers lost title to their farms through mortgage foreclosures, tax delinquency or bankruptcy during the past four years.

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department was reported planning to turn back to the Federal Treasury more than $60,000,000 of the 1936 soil conservation fund. It was said that payments to farmers would total slightly more than $400,000,000, while Congress appropriated $470,000,000 for that purpose.

Fireworks 'Battle' AtRegatta Planned

A spectacular exhibition of fireworks, featuring a mock battle between the Bon Homme Richard and the Seraphis, is planned for the President's Cup Regatta, September 23, reports submitted by the committee chairmen at a luncheon at the Harrington Hotel indicated yesterday.

At the conclusion of the pageant depicting the historic event, 500 aerial bombs will be released, each dropping an American flag attached to a parachute. Music will be furnished by the Navy Band.

H. D. Hildreth, pageant director, announced yesterday conferences with Secretary of the Navy Swanson and Secretary of Commerce Roper had led to the assurance the Government would co-operate in the display.

Mr. Roosevelt's Letter to Senate, House Leaders Urging Speedy Action on New Farm Legislation

Text of the President's letter to Senator Ellison D. Smith, chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, and to Representative Marvin Jones, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture:

As a Nation we are engaged in the task of giving stability and increasing purchasing power to those who toil in the factory and on the farm. It is true that industrial employment continues to gain and it is true that with few exceptions crops are good and prices for farm products are far above their low levels. This has led some people to say, with a certain degree of weariness, "let well enough alone; let us defer further action at this time."

Industrial work and farm work include the great majority of all Americans who toil. In both groups the curse of the past has been instability—instability of annual income.

That is especially true among the farmers of the Nation. Extremes of farm prices represent the principal cause of suffering, of bankruptcy and of lack of purchasing power among them. There is no benefit to any farmer if he sells his crops for high figures one year and the price drops through the bottom the next year.

We have not solved the problem of crop stability yet, though we have made much progress. Warning signals are already in sight. Existing laws are not adequate to guarantee future safety.

It is my philosophy that the time to repair a leaky roof is when the sun is shining.

Repeatedly in the last four years the Agricultural Committees of the Congress have worked with speed and effectiveness to enact emergency farm measures. In 1933 the agricultural adjustment act met a desperate price emergency. In 1934 the Congress made swift action possible in order to cope with the unprecedented drought. In 1936 the soil conservation and domestic allotment act served to hold the line after the AAA production adjustment program had been stopped by the Supreme Court.

We have been fortunate in the past, even though programs have been put through in the face of actual existing emergencies. Your committee will, I know, recognize the great difficulty from an administrative standpoint, of carrying through any program on the spur of the moment of threatened disaster.

Though the situation of the moment is excellent, we have no safeguard, even in the year 1938, against the great danger of loss of income due to drought or against the equally great danger of low prices. I have expressed my belief that a program to guard against both these future dangers would be of enormous value not only to farmers but to the consumers of the Nation if it could provide for an ever normal granary with storage of surpluses grown in big-crop years for use in time of short crops. Good as our present farm program is, it ought to be improved to take care of the consumers' interest in years of bad weather and of the producers' interest in years of good weather.

We welcome the prospect of the early return to well-filled bins, but we seek to avert the danger of ruinously low farm prices if bumper crops and over-hanging surpluses return. They can and should be managed in a way to benefit the entire country.

May I express to you once more my hope that your committee will go forward and that sympathetic consideration may be given by the Congress: first, to the continuation of the present agricultural conservation program as the foundation of the long-time plan; second, for the assurance of abundance for consumers by storage of substantial reserves of food for use in years of crop failure; third, for protection of farm prices and farm income.

Farmers and consumers can be safeguarded against the disaster that resulted from accumulation of surpluses by the Federal Farm Board, by the means of adjusting production and marketing of the five major export crops. If such adjustment is made available only after surpluses pile up with crushing effect, the cost will be prohibitive and the results doubtful.

I believe that the cost of this national farm program can be kept in line with the Government's fiscal program. Legislation can be integrated with existing programs in such a way as to involve no increase in expenditures for the fiscal year 1938 over existing authorizations for the operations of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

An all-weather farm program can level the peaks of oversupply into the valleys of shortage of disaster. It can serve alike the welfare of the farmer and the consumer, of business and of labor.

The vital interests of the Nation demand that sooner or later protective measures of this type be placed in effect. If we wait until next year the ultimate objective will be the same, but we may be faced with emergency conditions which would make the legislative and administrative problem more difficult because of the very fact of moving hurriedly under the fire of an emergency.

Text of President's Veto Message

Text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress vetoing the bill for low interest rates on Federal farm loans:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 6763, entitled "An act to extend for one additional year the 3½ per centum interest rate on certain Federal land-bank loans, to provide a 4 per centum interest rate on such loans for the period July 1, 1938, to June 30, 1939, and to provide for a 4 per centum interest rate on Land Bank Commissioners loan for a period of two years."

Section 1 of the bill extends for two additional years the policy originally adopted as an emergency measure in 1933 under which borrowers from the Federal land banks are allowed to pay interest on their loans at rates lower than those provided in their mortgage contracts.

Section 2 of the bill broadens the field of loans on which interest reductions are granted by providing that for a period of two years interest may be paid at the reduced rate of 4 per cent on loans made by the Land Bank Commissioner.

Section 1—Federal Land Bank Loans.

At present, through the sale of bonds to the investing public, new loans are being made by Federal land banks at the lowest rate that has ever been made available to farmers generally in this country, namely, 4 per cent per annum. A decrease in farm mortgage interest rates has been brought about through the refinancing operations of the Federal land banks and the Land Bank Commissioner. The average rate of interest on the private loans refinanced by the Federal land banks in 1933 and subsequent years has been 6.3 per cent.

Consequently, those farmers who refinanced their private loans in 1933 and 1934, by converting them into 5 per cent Federal land bank loans cut their annual interest charges more than 20 per cent, while those who have refinanced at the present 4 per cent rate have obtained a permanent reduction in excess of 40 per cent. I believe, therefore, that there is no justification for continued Government subsidy of Federal land bank interest rates below the unprecedentedly low rate these banks are now offering farmer-borrowers on a business basis.

Farm Income Improved.

Furthermore, the ability of farmers to pay interest at the rates provided for in their mortgages with the Federal land banks has been very substantially improved, due to an increase of more than 100 per cent in the level of farm prices since the emergency period of 1932-33. In December, 1936, the index of farm prices as reported by the Department of Agriculture stood at 126, as compared with 55 for the month of March, 1933, and an average of 100 for the pre-war period August, 1909, to July, 1914. The gross farm income as estimated by the Department of Agriculture also rose from $5,337,000,000 in 1932, to $9,530,000,000 in 1936.

As an illustration of the lightening of the interest burden during the past four years through improvements in farm prices and the refinancing of farm debt, the following instance may be cited: The quantity of farm products required to meet the annual interest charge on a 6.3 per cent private loan refinanced as a 5 per cent Federal land bank loan in 1933 is now only 63 per cent of the quantity required during the five pre-war years 1910 to 1914. The greatly increased debt-paying capacity indicated in the foregoing figures is borne out by the record of actual payments on Federal land bank loans. Approximately 85 per cent of all loans of the Federal land banks were in good standing at the end of 1936, as opposed to approximately 50 per cent delinquency when the emergency legislation was first passed.

Constitutes a Gift.

The reduction of the rates of interest on Federal land bank loans to 3½ per cent for the fiscal year 1938, and to 4 per cent for the fiscal year 1939, as required by the bill for loans made through national farm loan associations would, it is estimated, necessitate payments from the Treasury in the amount of approximately $31,700,000 for the former year and $21,200,000 for the latter, a total of $52,900,000. The effect of such an arrangement is that part of the individual borrower's interest is paid for him by the United States. In other words it constitutes a gift to individual borrowers from the Federal Treasury.

As indicated by me in my letter of June 8, 1937, addressed to the committees of Congress then considering this legislation, the whole question involves the rate of interest charged by Government agencies and relates not only to farm loans, but also to moneys lent by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Public Works Administration, and other agencies.

The foregoing considerations have led me to the conclusion that further reductions in the interest rates payable on Federal land bank loans are not justified.

Section 2; Land Bank Commissioner Loans.

The farm loans made by the Land Bank Commissioner on behalf of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bear an interesting rate of 5 per cent per annum. In view of the circumstances under which these loans are made, it cannot reasonably be said that a 5 per cent rate of interest is excessive. Comparison with Federal land bank loans may serve to illustrate this point. A majority of the loans made by the Land Bank Commissioner are secured by second mortgages. Federal land bank loans may only be granted on first mortgage security. A Land Bank Commissioner loan may be made for an amount which, taking into account any prior liens, equals 75 per cent of the value of the property, including both land and building.

A Federal land bank loan is restricted by law to a sum not exceeding 50 per cent of the value of the land and 20 per cent of the value of the improvements. Land Bank Commissioner loans are frequently granted upon farms which because of some physical or economic hazard would not qualify as security for a Federal land bank loan. Finally, Land Bank Commissioner loans lack the element of co-operative responsibility through stock ownership by borrowers of their national farm loan associations upon which the Federal land bank system is built.

In view of the added factors of risk present in the average Land Bank Commissioner loan, I feel that the 5 per cent interest rate charged on these loans compares favorably with the present 4 per cent rate of the Federal land banks. I have been unable to find any system in which second mortgage loans have been made available to farmers generally on a basis as low as the present 5 per cent Land Bank Commissioner loan rate.

Income Cut Seen.

The contemplated reduction in interest rates on commissioner loans from 5 per cent to 4 per cent under the bill would reduce the annual income of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, which owns these loans, by an amount of approximately $8,350,000. No provision is made for a corresponding reimbursement of this sum by the Treasury to the corporation. Losses suffered by the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation ultimately fall upon the United States as the sole holder of the corporation's capital stock. More than this, the payment of principal and interest on all bonds issued by the corporation is guaranteed by the United States.

Any reduction in the interest rate on commissioner loans will place the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation in such a position that there is a definite possibility that it may not be able to meet its obligations from its own income.

* * * *

The passage of this bill was not contemplated in the preparation of the budget for the fiscal year 1938. As the Congress is well aware, I am definitely seeking the balancing of that budget. To this end, I have called upon the heads of all Government departments, establishments, and agencies to set up reserves of not less than 10 per cent of all funds available for the fiscal year 1938, except such funds as are not susceptible to such treatment. Approval by me of the bill under consideration, involving as it does an additional draft upon the Treasury in excess of $50,000,000 during the fiscal year 1938, would be totally inconsistent with my purpose to bring about a balancing of the budget for that year.

For all of these reasons I am constrained to withhold my approval of the bill, H. R. 6763.

105 Deny Guilt On Conspiracy, Gaming Counts

Plisco Fails to Appear for Arraignment in District Court.

That Washington's alleged gaming interests are prepared to fight to escape conviction on gaming and conspiracy charges was indicated in District Court yesterday when 105 men were arraigned and without exception denied their guilt.

It had been expected around the Court House that here and there some would enter a guilty plea in order to receive a lighter sentence.

The 105 were indicted July 2 along with 19 others, who for various reasons were not in court yesterday. Those who were missing were directed by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue to appear Friday.

Chief among those missing was Abe Plisco, alias Dietz, whose bondsman notified Justice O'Donoghue he was out of town, but would be here shortly. Dietz was described by police as being the master-mind of a syndicate that was furnishing up-to-the-minute racetrack information to scores of places in the District. His offices in the Albee Building were twice raided.

Cahill Pleads Innocent.

William Cahill, pictured as a partner of Dietz, pleaded not guilty, as did 30 others who were mentioned in the indictment that accused them of conspiracy to violate the gaming laws. Included in the 32 were five policemen—Detective Sergt. Fred Antionelli, Precinct Detectives Frank M. White and Charles A. Berry and Privates Albert L. Embrey, jr., and William B. Satterthwaite, all of whom joined in the not guilty plea.

Two others who were rated by Detective Lieut. Floyd Truscott as being major objectives of the 65 raids launched by men operating under him, Carroll P. (Nubby) Nuckols and Nicholas Floratos, alias Nick the Greek, also denied their guilt.

Bench warrants for the arrest of four men named in a conspiracy indictment, George Mason, Louis J. Waldron, Ray Lawson and Wilbur Dorsey, were placed in the hands of police when Assistant United States Attorneys Samuel F. Beach and Roger Robb declared they had not been found and were believed to be out of town. Four others named in a different indictment also were named in bench warrants issued by Justice O'Donoghue. They are Bill Dietz, Joe Miller, Joe Wolf and Hugh Moore, who are charged with setting up a gaming table.

Arraignments Postponed.

Arraignment of Plisco, Samuel M. Lawder, Samuel B. Brown, Charles J. Bird, all charged with conspiracy; Wadie Aed, John M. Harris, Manny Kline, James W. Campo, Mike Falcone, George W. Godfrey and Frank Manuel Goldberg, all of whom were indicted for setting up a gaming table, was postponed until next week, when the reasons advanced for their absence were accepted by the court.

Prosecutors Robb and Beach announced they hoped to try the conspiracy case, with its 32 defendants, early in the fall term of court. They said that as rapidly as possible the remaining cases would be tried.

Kingsford-Smith Alive in Jungle, Brother Believes

Oakland, Calif., July 12 (AP).—R. H. K. Smith expressed confidence today that his brother, Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, survived when his plane, Southern Cross, disappeared in November, 1935.

Smith said his belief is based on photographs of part of the landing gear of the plane, found on a remote rim of the Bay of Bengal last week.

The pictures, Smith said, showed no barnacles or sea growth on the wheel, strut or undercarriage which a sportsman lifted from Andaman Sea. He said he believed the plane crashed on an island and the landing gear recently floated off the beach.

"I believe my brother is living in the jungle now, waiting until help comes," he asserted. When last seen, Smith said, his brother was speeding shoreward in a flaming plane from a spot near the Andaman Islands at the south of the Andaman Sea.

Mother Has 11th Child And Works in 2 Hours

Hollywood, July 12 (AP).—Mrs. Esther Estes, wife of 72-year-old Dr. St. Louis Estes, raw food advocate, interrupted her household routine for two hours Saturday to give birth to her eleventh child, a 9-pound girl. Mrs. Estes said her ability to resume work shortly after childbirth was due to simple health rules.

"We eat only raw foods, such as fruits, vegetables and nuts," she said. "We don't serve fish or fowl or meats of animals with blood streams."

Detective Wise Denies Charge of Extortion

Indicted on a charge of extortion, Detective Luther Wise yesterday pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice Daniel W. O'Donogue in District Court.

Wise is charged with taking $10 in marked money from Fred Kosma, proprietor of a lunchroom near Fourteenth and Irving streets northwest last May. The alleged exchange of money took place before two police officials who watched from a place of concealment.

New Law Gives Prince Georges Man Freedom

Max Fisher's Appearance Before Parole Board Unnecessary.

Because he will be freed this week under a new law, Max Fisher will not be represented at the monthly parole hearing Wednesday before J. Cookman Boyd, State parole commissioner, in Baltimore. Fisher was convicted in Prince Georges County in May, 1936, of false pretense.

Fisher will be eligible for release from the State penal farm at Roxbury on Friday. He was among 115 prisoners who qualified for release under the act known as the "industrial good time law."

He was the only parole applicant to be affected by the new law, passed by the recent Legislature. The petitions of the other 34 prisoners who had made parole applications will be heard.

In discussing the case, Commissioner Boyd said "Fisher will be released on Friday. If his case were heard on Wednesday, he could not get his parole before then. There would be no need to hear his application."

Fisher was sentenced to 18 months in the House of Correction and later was transferred to the penal farm. He had earned sufficient time off his sentence for good behavior and work in prison industries to complete his term by Friday.

Central Europe would benefit by the adoption of a reciprocal trade policy similar to that advocated by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, students of the University of Maryland were told yesterday by Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the National University Law School.

"It is probable that central European countries would be benefited if their statesmen studied a little more carefully the economic principles of the present Secretary of State. Unquestionably a free, or freer, exchange of goods among central European countries would be advantageous to all."

Dr. Pergler, formerly prominent in Czechoslovakian diplomatic and political circles, denied that the new states of central Europe were "created" by the Paris treaties, asserting they merely confirmed an accomplished fact.

Nine college graduates took an examination yesterday in the office of Harry T. Jones, State employment commissioner, for the office of district forester at Laurel.

Several Eastern colleges were represented among the applicants.

From the list furnished by Commissioner Jones of those who pass the examination, one will be named to succeed C. F. Winslow. Winslow resigned last month to join the University of Maryland extension service.

Tree trimming was started yesterday in Hyattsville under a permit from the State Forestry Department.

Walter Quick, jr., assistant forester, has given instructions in the proper manner for cutting and trimming the trees. Most of the work consists of removing limbs from the paths of pedestrians and automobiles.

Quick commented that the town financed a few years ago a thorough job of tree trimming under expert supervision. Because of this project, he said, little work had to be done this year.

Seaman Vanishes Off U.S. Gunboat; West Virginian

Ellis Randall Carpenter, seaman second class, of Clarksburg, W. Va., disappeared Friday from the gunboat Erie while en route from Dahlgren, Va., to Newport, R. I., the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Carpenter was last seen on the ship at 5 a. m. After he was reported missing, the Erie and six destroyers, carrying midshipmen on their summer cruise, made a four-hour seach for him.

Naval officials here, who expressed the belief Carpenter fell overboard, said a Navy board will meet on the Erie to report on the seaman's disappearance.

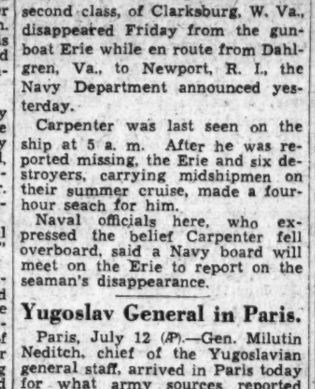
Contract Bridge

Sleeping Dogs.

One of the most disquieting experiences a bridge player can undergo is to have sleeping dogs bite him. (That is the only way I can describe what happened to poor South in the hand below.) The reason it is so disturbing is that you are seldom sure of yourself after such a disaster. The opponents, you have learned, are just as dangerous when they've passed as when they've bid.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1♡
Pass	1 N T	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	2♣
Dbl.	2♡	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

I have no fault to find with South's fourth-hand bid. Just such hands often provide juicy part-scores and even an occasional game. His decision to pass one no-trump was a tip-off to West that North and South really didn't have very much. Since his own hand had been very close to an opening bid, West realized that there was an opportunity for a large swing if his partner also had a few high cards. If not, it was hardly likely that his side could get into trouble at a low contract.

A take-out double of one no-trump, unlike the take-out double of a suit, bears a heavy penalty connotation. The doubler's partner is expected to pass for penalties with any reasonably fair hand. Despite West's original pass, which limited his strength considerably, East passed the double for penalties. His own holding of two Kings and two Queens was so much more than West could reasonably have expected that he felt sure a contract of one no-trump by North and South would be impossible of fulfillment. South's singleton diamond now worried him and he jumped out of the frying pan into the fire. His bid of two clubs was promptly jumped on by West, who recognized East's penalty pass as indicating a pretty fair hand. East confirmed this impression by doubling two hearts when North rescued to that contract.

Since dummy had preferred hearts to clubs and was apparently short in clubs, West decided to limit dummy's ruffing power, and opened the Queen of trumps. South won with the Ace of hearts, led to the Ace of clubs, and returned a low club. East spiked declarer's guns by hopping up with the King of clubs and leading his King and last trump.

South's position at this stage was utterly hopeless—no matter what he did he could not take more than four trump tricks and the minor suit Aces. He was, therefore, beaten for 500 points on a hand which both opponents had not considered worth a bid!

Guild Strike Stops Decatur, Ill., Paper

Decatur, Ill., July 12 (AP).—Residents obtained their news from radio broadcasts or a strikers' newspaper today as a walkout of 17 editorial employes, members of the American Newspaper Guild, forced suspension of publication of the Herald-Review, Decatur's only daily paper.

Edward Lindsay, editor, broadcast news reports at frequent intervals over a local radio station. On his first trip to the radio station a guild picket snatched the news report from his hands. It was restored to him, however, after a conference of guild officials, and there was no further interference.

Seattle, July 12 (AP).—The American Newspaper Guild chapter here announced a mass meeting tomorrow night to acquaint the public with the causes of the walkout at the Seattle Star July 3. The paper continued publishing with skeleton staffs under police guard.

American Diplomat.

There was more than customary Viennese courtesy in the spontaneous ceremony held in that city Sunday, when George L. Messersmith left the Austrian capital and his post as American Minister there. The presence of Chancellor Schuschnigg and other governmental officials at the railroad station, the flowers showered upon Mrs. Messersmith, the note of deep regret in the Vienna press comment, all attest the great success with which this brilliant career diplomat has filled a most difficult and delicate post.

Mr. Messersmith returns to this country to become an Assistant Secretary of State. The promotion is richly deserved, but congratulations must be tempered by regret over his departure from a key position where he has shown such exceptional skill. Better than anyone else the Austrians know how much he has done for their country, both in making its heavy problems better known here and in tactfully assisting Austria's efforts to preserve her spiritual and cultural values in behalf of world civilization.

It was early in 1934 that Mr. Messersmith went to Vienna, having spent the four previous years as Consul-General in Berlin. Thus he was in Germany when the Weimar republic was overthrown by the Nazis and in Austria when Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated in the attempt to establish the swastika by coup d'etat there. In both countries his tenure of service has coincided with the flare-up of problems of great danger and complexity. In both he has more than fulfilled his duties, showing always a diplomatic skill which is frequently said to have been an important factor in the preservation of European peace.

There need be no anxiety over the thorough competence of our Department of State as long as it is staffed by men as able and tactful as this former superintendent of schools in Delaware. And while George Messersmith is one who always places his work first it may be hoped that he will be able to utilize the relative tranquillity of Washington to put his notes in order. For if he will sometime write his autobiography for the last seven years it will reveal much of the stuff of which history is made.

Incitement To Violence.

The riots in Massillon, Ohio, are a reminder that community peace is constantly endangered when plants have to operate under police protection. Of course, mass picketing for the purpose of intimidating non-strikers, destruction of company property by strikers and all such unlawful practices should be put down with a firm hand. The right to work and the right to give employment to those willing to work is incontestable. A state of anarchy prevails when the law enforcement agencies of a government fail to provide proper protection to those going about their lawful business.

So strongly does the public feel about violation of these elemental rights of the citizen that it has reacted very positively against the coercive tactics pursued by the C. I. O. in its struggle with the independent steel companies. In Johnstown, Pa., for example, a citizens' committee protested vigorously when Gov. Earle declared martial law and closed the Cambria steel plant in response to a threat of C. I. O. invasion. As a result, the plant was reopened within a few days after the threatened crisis had passed. In Ohio, presumably in response to an aroused public opinion, the Governor called on National Guardsmen to protect non-strikers, keep plants closed to maintain the status quo and later to guard them when reopened.

Failure of the law enforcement agencies to provide needed protection in many centers of strike disturbances has aroused widespread vigilante sentiment which is itself a very dangerous development. Recently, a group of Johnstown citizens announced their intention of launching a movement to organize a national chain of committees "to defend the right of local self-government" and the right to work.

With the reopening of strike-closed plants proceeding under police protection all excuse for citizen groups to establish themselves as self-appointed law enforcement agencies disappears. That is extremely fortunate because these vigilante groups are a potential menace to organized government. The remedy for lax protection of citizens in their right to work is the election of fearless and impartial executives, not private encroachment upon governmental functions.

Such protection the steel companies have rightly insisted upon having and are now obtaining from the constituted authorities. The community responsibility for safeguarding their property and the right of their employes to work is admitted. The companies, in turn, owe it to the communities in which they are established to abandon their provocatively intransigeant attitude toward organized labor.

The limited local agreements reached or reported to have been reached with some of the independents are really little more than working arrangements which leave disputed issues to be dealt with in subsequent negotiations. Nevertheless, they are an admission on the part of the managements that adjustments must be made eventually.

Whether signed contracts are to be insisted upon, and whether the C. I. O. shall be selected as representative of the workers, are questions with which the National Labor Relations Board should deal. The fact to keep in mind is that these important issues are still unsettled and the mere opening of plants under police guard does not provide a basis for effective collective bargaining. It is not even a guarantee of peace as the recrudescence of violence in Massillon clearly shows.

The Fighting At Peiping.

Sham battles have led to real encounters in the environs of Peiping, where the Japanese policy of goading the Chinese has at last forced that long-suffering people to hit back. As to the fundamental responsibility for the present fighting there can be no doubt. Japanese aggression in northern China has been so flagrant, and the Japanese policy of holding military maneuvers on Chinese soil so provocative, that the retaliation now apparent need occasion no surprise.

Paradoxically, it is the patience shown by the Chinese in the face of countless indignities and affronts which makes the present encounters seem the more serious. For months indications of a stiffening in the attitude of Nanking have been accumulating. Even if the time for the worm to turn is not yet at hand, it is unlikely to be indefinitely delayed. Soon or late the point will be reached when further compromise between developing Chinese nationalism and assertive Japanese imperialism will be impossible. The world can only hope that this dread moment is not yet at hand.

While American attention has for the most part been concentrated on the threat of war in Europe, that in the Far East has become steadily more ominous. Of course the Chinese have neither forgotten nor forgiven the rape of Manchuria six years ago, the vindictive destruction of a large part of Shanghai and the subsequent encroachments which have brought Japanese troops down to the very walls of Peiping, the former capital. The necessity of yielding to superior force has solidified Chinese unity and greatly stimulated the national will to resistance. Perhaps we have now reached the oft-predicted incident when Chiang Kai-shek will refuse to turn the other cheek.

If so, Japan has got a problem on her hands. China is no longer the inert and helpless giant she used to be. In the past six years her industries have grown enormously, her finances have been placed in order; internal communications have been greatly improved and her armies unified, trained and modernized. In a brief campaign the Japanese might still have it all their own way. But if China really rises, and can count on a friendly Russian attitude, the odds are by no means altogether in favor of Tokyo.

That this is appreciated in Japan itself is shown by the efforts in the Diet to institute a more liberal policy toward China, and the overwhelming indorsement given to those efforts at the recent general election. The Japanese army, however, is virtually free from civilian control. And it may be that the generals, disliking the opposition to their forward policy which has developed, are not disinclined to create a situation which would force their domestic critics to be silent or risk the label of "unpatriotic."

In any case the Tokyo government should realize in time that it would meet more opposition in a war against China than the Chinese themselves would furnish, though this might be considerable. The sympathies of the American people, certainly, would be strongly on the side of the country Japan has already so severely victimized.

Good relations with the United States are worth more to Japan than anything which she could gain by gorging herself further on indigestible Chinese territory. And such good relations, regardless of a nominal neutrality, would be impossible should the present inflamed situation lead to anything resembling war.

Musical Messiah.

Tin Pan Alley's finest flower is dead. The reference implies no disparagement of George Gershwin. He was always proud that he had served his musical apprenticeship as a New York "plugger," accompanying song-and-dance men in cheap overnight stands while noting down for publishers the numbers best received. And indeed, he might well have recalled with satisfaction this experience, for from it he learned to gauge popular tastes to such a nicety that tremendous hits like "Lady Be Good," and "Oh, Kay!" flowed easily from his pen.

However, it will not be for these that he will be remembered. The country has other composers such as Irving Berlin and Jerome Kern, who have set it whistling with far greater regularity than Gershwin ever did. Gershwin's renown, instead, will hang more on his deftness as a satirist. Together with his brother Ira, he succeeded in at last pulling popular music out of the "June-moon-bliss-kiss" stage of its development. In "Let 'Em Eat Cake," the two gave the Nation a hilariously welcome take-off on the doings of Washington at a particularly pompous period of its history.

But Gershwin went beyond satire in his attempts to make articulate the spirit of the country. He also hoped to interpret it in serious tones. In this, too, he achieved his most important successes. In "A Rhapsody in Blue," and "An American in Paris," both of which adapted jazz techniques for their principal effects, he gave the world two admirable musical pictures of the America of the Turbulent Twenties. A measure of their merit was indicated by the fact that he was invited often to play the solo parts with the leading symphony orchestras of the country, while in Europe he became known as the messiah come to lead the world out of the wilderness of overworked classicism.

The most ambitious undertaking of his career was heard in Washington last year—"Porgy and Bess." Here, as everywhere, it was acclaimed with greatest enthusiasm, particularly because it indicated that Gershwin's genius finally was coming to full flower. Now, of course, his work is finished. Now the world may never have the strange story of its post-war years ever adequately set down in music.

Wisdom At St. John's.

Stringfellow Barr, the new president of St. John's College, will be well-advised to go slowly and think carefully in the opening stages of his incumbency at "the little college on the banks of the Severn."

And he will save himself both heartaches and headaches later on if he realizes how that his first job is not to revolutionize the Annapolis institution to make it a provincial reflection of the University of Chicago, as developed by Robert Maynard Hutchins. The task at hand, rather, is to put the shattered finances of St. John's in order so that it may again fulfill its natural destiny in a normal, healthy and useful fashion.

In the course of the past few years St. John's has had three presidents who, each in his separate way, assumed the job with the idea of making the college over to fit their very different personal ideas of what it should be. Of these three only Maj. Enoch B. Garey showed any real appreciation of what St, John's has stood for in the past. And President Garey failed both because his administration was erratic and because it coincided with an increase of debt under which the school still staggers.

Already there are indications that Mr. Barr is heading for the same reefs which ended the academic careers of Messrs. Garey, Gordon and Woodcock, and from the dangers of which the college is as yet by no means secure. In a statement printed in the Baltimore Sunday Sun the new president outlines his "new plan" for St. John's, concluding with the observation that the most adequate statement of the educational principles he favors is found in Dr. Hutchins' recent book on "The Higher Learning in America."

Even if Dr. Hutchins' ideas were above criticism, and they are not, there would be a grave risk in trying to graft them on to a college which for generations now has been identified with a certain locality and the way of life therein. The St. John's tradition is the tradition of Maryland: Open-minded, gracious, generous, not highly intellectual, but resolutely non-fanatical. This is the foundation on which any successful president must build. If he tries to graft the ideas of a Meiklejohn or a Hutchins on this ancient stock, it will merely kill the tree, together with the parasitic growth.

So the many alumni and friends of St. John's in this vicinity will purse their lips when they read Mr. Barr's statement that "we shall have to re-educate our faculty." There is nothing the matter with the faculty at St. John's. It is the presidents who have caused the trouble. Three of them have had to be re-educated in 15 years. It is to be hoped that Mr. Barr will not prove just a fourth who missed a notable opportunity to give the college a breathing spell in which to resuscitate itself.

In his statement of policy the new president refers to the necessity of familiarising students with "our common heritage of human wisdom." The thought is good, but the wording is singularly unfortunate. There is a heritage of human knowledge. Wisdom is something which, for all its desirability, cannot be handed down, learned from books, or brought in a package to Annapolis from Chicago.

And yet it is the quality which, above all others, is vitally important for the president of lovable St. John's, still groggy from the effervescence of the bright ideas inflicted on it by Mr. Barr's three predecessors.

So often it is the case that the man behind the eight ball has a head to match.

Constitutional Convention.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A "Voter for 30 Years" from Onancock, Va., wants to know why the Supreme Court fight should come up again. He claims that our forefathers were farsighted men in writing the Constitution. But he does not know that the members of the Constitutional Convention were generally agreed that there would probably never be more than 15 or 16 States. Is that farsighted?

Has this voter ever studied the historical aspects of the adoption of the Constitution? Does he know that clause after clause was debated and argued, pro and con, and that in numerous instances the committee drafting the Constitution divided almost equally as to what clauses shold be adopted and what should not? Does he know that there were three distinct compromises made before the 39 men even could come to a majority agreement as to what provisions should be submitted to the State Legislatures?

Does he know that 16 men duly elected to the Constitutional Convention never even reached their destination and had no part whatsoever in determining what the Constitution should contain? Does he know that the majority of these 39 men who actualy did approve the provisions of the final draft were so dissatisfied with it that they agreed that it would never be adopted by the requisite number of State Legislatures?

Does he know that the Constitution was never submitted to a referendum vote of the people? Does he know that had not the Constitution makers agreed in advance to later submit the Bill of Rights (the first ten amendments) that no State Legislature would ever have approved the main body of the Constitution because of its reactionary provisions on the "rights of property?" Does he know that a majority of the 39 men represented only the feudal landowners and the mercantilist class, and that the small farmer and laboring class had no part in the Constitutional Convention?

Does he know that the State constitutions are now adopted by referendum vote of the people, but that the Federal Constitution-makers were not interested in democracy at all, because they wanted to have their class control the Nation?

The O'Connell Resolution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to be a great deal of misunderstanding in certain circles as to how the United States should make sure that it would not be drawn into a general European war which may easily develop from the Spanish war. He who sent you the letter entitled "Recognize Insurgents," has no knowledge whatsoever of what would be the result of granting belligerent rights to the Fascist rebels in Spain.

If the great powers, like Great Britain, France and the United States, would recognize the Spanish rebels, the Fascists would be given a free hand to stop, search, molest, or sink any vessel on the high seas. This molestation of international commerce would be done not only by the rebels, but also by their allies and generous patrons, Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany. The result would be a general war which would involve the United States also.

Therefore, instead of destructive suggestions, we need a plan which will give positive assurance that the United States will not be dragged into the European war. Such constructive plan is that of Representative O'Connell, of Montana, who already has introduced a resolution in Congress. All peace-loving individuals should demand support for this O'Connell resolution (H. J. Res. 390), which aims "to declare Germany and Italy nations at war with Spain under the terms of the neutrality act of 1937, and to invoke the terms thereof against Germany and Italy, as it is already invoked against Spain."

This resolution, when made a law, will assure the neutrality of the United States, and will also make it impossible for Hitler and Mussolini to continue their war against the Spanish republic, since the Fascist dictators need American gasoline, oil, iron and copper to make war on democratic Spain.

Awesome Prediction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our institutions and the liberties of the people are in the balance. If the court packing scheme is enacted by Congress our Government becomes one of men and not of laws, almost immediately the last vestige of individualism and freedom will disappear from amongst us. Such has been the objective of those in power from the beginning of their advent to office—in fact, such was their purpose in seeking control of the Government.

This they were careful to conceal from the people until they were secure in the saddle. The supporting evidence is available and overwhelming, and sufficiently well known to the intelligent people of the country. Their sole purpose, which they have pursued relentlessly, and accompanied with coercion and intimidation, has been to turn the industries of the country over to the proletariat, and sovietize the Government.

Their methods bear a striking resemblance, and, indeed, are parallel with the methods and tactics followed by the present European dictators. The results so far have shown how much easier it is to overthrow a government from within than from without. However, our liberties will not be lost for long for there still resides within the hearts of the intelligent and worth-while people of America an undying love of liberty, which they will never surrender even at the cost of deluging our Nation in blood, if necessary, to recover it. There are indications today that efforts are being put forth, and organizations perfected on the quiet, in anticipation of the time when the fight for the restoration of our institutions and liberties will have to be inaugurated. There is indisputable evidence of this fact. The consequences are awful to contemplate, but what is life without liberty? Its recovery will in the end be worth all the strife and bloodshed it may cost.

Americans be on guard! Awake from your apathy, and prepare yourselves to defend your institutions and liberties!

Virginia Banking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Virginians are threatened with the continuance of an obsolete and antiquated system of banking, should the views expressed by M. R. Morgan last week before the State bankers' gathering at Hot Springs prevail.

Morgan, representing the forces opposed to the passage of the bill of Senator McAdoo, which is a bill to allow branch banking, places the interests of a few bankers above and in preference to the business interests and the farmers of the State, who have long suffered from an inadequate financial setup.

The greatest need of the State today is banks with ample resources to develop fully the natural advantages and resources which abound on every hand. The passage of the McAdoo measure will provide such banking facilities.

When this bill becomes a law, the grip which the present financial overlords of the State enjoy will be loosened forever.

The Morgan plan is the old reactionary policy of the small crossroads bank, but little changed from the days of barter of Sir Walter Raleigh's time, when tobacco was traded for wives.

Virginia is entitled to a better deal and must have it—nothing less will satisfy.

Lewis On The Constitution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "A. S. L." in a letter to The Post dated July 7 states that Congressman Lewis of Maryland in a speech in the House thoroughly demonstrated his ignorance of the Constitution and the decisions of the Supreme Court.

Every person who is old enough to take the slightest interest in public affairs knows that there is not now and never has been in the Congress of the United States a more profound student of constitutional history than David J. Lewis. He has enjoyed this reputation for a great many years and A. S. L.'s statement is merely displaying a refreshing ignorance.

A Socialist Laborite Disclaims Thomas

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Norman Thomas, Socialist, is for the C. I. O. as the route the Socialist Labor Party must take." This statement appeared in a letter to The Post from Edward P. Hubbell on July 9. The writer in making this assertion betrays a careless handling of his facts.

Norman Thomas is not and never was of the Socialist Labor Party. As is generally known, Mr. Thomas is the official mouthpiece of the Socialist Party which at the turn of the century was launched by the reform elements expelled from the Socialist Labor Party and the reform groups that were already gathering momentum on the outside. They dedicated themselves to the task of erecting a huge machine for misrepresenting socialism to the end of confusing the workers of the land. Unfortunately, then, as now, nothing could be done to prevent this vile usurpation of the term "Socialism."

Reform elements of every hue and color from Franklin D. Roosevelt and Norman Thomas down to the rabid burlesque Communists, tussling as they do with effects, support the C. I. O. This fact alone suffices to stamp the C. I. O. the bourgeois-reform outfit it is and to rule it out as the "route the Socialist Labor Party must take." On the contrary, it is becoming increasingly evident that the C. I. O. is the route that the propertied interests must travel if they are to continue the prevailing property relations, i. e., private ownership in the collectively operated tool of production.

The big propertied interests are already beginning to perceive, as Myron C. Taylor, of the U. S. Steel Corporation, has, that the C. I. O. represents the convenient herding of that ever threatening revolutionary working class into an instrument which can be used to hold the workers in tow. As Mr. Taylor said at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City last November, "All the world has been forced to admire the success of Premier Mussolini in disciplining the nation."

The disciplining agency in Italy that he had reference to is the industrial form of union, such as Lewis and his gang are succeeding in buliding here. Its object is to sell the workers en masse (by industries) on the auction block of wage slavery, firmly binding them (via contracts) to a docile acceptance of the status quo in property and the recognition of the right of the propertied elements in their exploitation of the propertyless.

Genuine revolutionary industrial unionism, on the contrary, challenges this "right" by declaring unequivocally for the abolition of the private ownership in the means of life and the establishment of the industrial republic of labor wherein each worker will receive the full social value of his toil.

True industrial unionism organizes the workers according to the product from the bottom clear to the top on the economic field to accomplish this fundamental change in ownership (private to collective) and organizes their political strength behind the Socialist Labor Party.

This, and this alone, is the route the workers of America must take.

The Post Impressionist

THERE were two aspects of the Romantic Movement in Europe that concerned America. One was the idea of America as a political haven for freedom-seeking souls. In 1794, for example, the poets Coleridge and Southey planned to establish a community in America under a scheme they called Pantisocracy. Coleridge even went so far as to write a sonnet about it. Shelley, too, in his "Revolt of Islam" apostrophized America as the place where "Freedom and Truth are Worshiped," where "the multitudinous earth shall sleep beneath thy shade." The mystic poet-artist William Blake wrote:

Though born on the cheating banks of Thames—
Though his waters bathed my infant limbs—
The Ohio shall wash his stains from me;
I was born a slave, but I go to be free.

* * *

The other was the back-to-nature aspect of romanticism, the "noble savage" idea of Rousseau. It is no wonder that the vastness, the physical virginity of America should appeal to Europeans who were becoming sick of the staining Thameses and felt that they were being cheated out of some of the primitive goodness with which they were born.

The Frenchman, Chateaubriand, was one of the few fortunate enough to be able to do some actual exploring in America. His impressions of the American wilderness, in territory now quite changed, were no less than ecstatic. "When," he says, "after passing the Mohawk I entered woods which had never felt the ax, I was seized by a sort of intoxication of independence. I went from tree to tree, to right and left, saying to myself, 'Here are no more roads or cities or monarchy or republic or president or kings or men.' And in order to find out if I was restored to my original rights I did various wilful things that made my guide furious. In his heart he believed me mad."

On seeing Niagara by moonlight, he exclaimed:

"The grandeur, the amazing melancholy of this picture cannot be expressed in human language; the fairest night of Europe can give no conception of it.

* * *

Many decades have passed since then, and now, as Henry Canby says, "more Americans go back to nature for one reason or another annually than any civilized men before them." But some morning they will wake up and discover that they have no more nature to go back to. And it will be no dream.

Even now, it is certain, our children will never know the American wilderness as our fathers or perhaps we have known it. How many of them will thrill at the sight of a stand of virgin timber; or gaze, wonder-bound, at a whole bay covered with waterfowl? The encroachments of civilization are closing in at an alarmingly pernicious pace. Even the "ageless" Rockies are threatened by a disfiguring tunnel. It is hard to make people contemplate the tragedy that when the wilderness is gone it is gone for good. Grand Canyons are not made in a season, but a skyline drive, rutting the grandeur of a whole mountain chain, can be blasted through in the twinkling of an eye.

The City of Washington has something of a wilderness at its very doorstep—the Potomac River Valley as far as Great Falls, the territory embraced by the proposed Potomac River Parkway. But this, too, is in danger of being filled with motor roads and other developments.

There is a ray of hope, however, that this and other wilderness and near-wilderness areas throughout the country may be saved, for two months ago there was organized, after two years of planning, the Wilderness Society, whose one object is to work for the preservation of the remnants of America's once matchless wilderness. Already the society, with nearly 600 members, has taken part in a number of wilderness projects, including the Potomac Parkway, the Great Smoky Mountain Skyline Drive, the Rocky Mountain tunnel, the Grand Canyon Wilderness, the Okefenokee Swamp, the Kentucky Virgin Timber and at least 20 others.

There are thousands of persons in America who are oblivious to the wilderness, whose only response to nature may be their thrill at some arresting vista or a glorious sunset as they speed along the highway, or perhaps at the wonders of a luxuriant windowbox. But there are thousands of others, and their numbers are increasing, who turn to the outdoors and to the woods and waters for fun, recreation, spiritual inspiration and health.

The attempt to meet the demands of this multitude, no matter how worthy their intentions, is operating to destroy the very things they go to nature to seek; for, strangely, man and nature are too often antagonistic.

If the Wilderness Society, formed by a small group of men and women looking beyond the demands and expediencies of the present, can somehow co-ordinate these conflicting desires and purposes and help to salvage a fair sample of the great American wilderness for oncoming generations, it will have done a magnificent feat. It would truly be a significant thing if American freedom and the American wilderness could go on together and be, as they were for Chateaubriand, forever inseparable in the lives of the people.

"Kansans Are Friendly People!"

ELMDALE, Kans., July 10.—Kansans are friendly people!

Life may not come as easily to them as it does to some in the neighboring States, but that fact does not prevent them from sharing what they have, and from enthroning that king of virtues—open-hearted hospitality.

TOM McCARTHY.

I should know. I entered Emporia, Kans., early one morning, dressed as a tramp, with no money. My single salable asset was a willingness to work.

When you want to work, in Kansas, and have no job, it is a matter of prime concern to everyone you meet. For the professional "relief er," they have small sympathy. In the person looking for a job, they have a deep interest.

On the edge of the town of Emporia I approached an old man sitting on a porch.

"Mister, do you know anyone who is looking for a hand in the harvest?" The old man was sure there were jobs to be found, but he couldn't tell me what person I should see. As I went off toward town I could hear him asking a neighbor if he knew anyone looking for a harvest hand. He was telling the neighbor about the "young man" looking for a job.

At the Federal re-employment agency my reception was less warm; "No calls today."

At the feed and grain store they were willing to help; sure that I should find work, but unable to be definite. And in the fields about the town I was told:

"You're a little late. Most everyone is through shocking and I'm sorry but I've got a full crew for the threshing."

Sometimes the answer was "Come back Friday, we begin threshing then." But I needed work right away.

• • • •

EVERYONE I had talked with overlooked the fact that I was dressed trampishly, and was a stranger to the region. All, even in refusal, were cordial, friendly. By noon I was still without a job.

I passed the golf course. I figured that I should at least be able to earn the price of a meal caddying.

The club professional asked me if I had ever caddied. I told him I used to caddy in New York State. I actually had played the game, so I thought I would make out all right.

"If it's just the price of a meal you want to earn," he said, "we'll be glad to let you caddy. Don't pull any fast ones, though."

I asked him what he meant by fast ones, and he said that sometimes strange caddies try to steal golf balls or clubs.

After a time, a boy stuck his head in through an opening and said. "The pro wants somebody to shag golf balls while he practices driving." Then he turned his head to me and said, "You'll do."

I wasn't very good at spotting the balls the pro drove in my direction, and I'm afraid I lost a few. At the end, I mentioned that to him and he said it didn't matter because they were practice balls. He gave me a quarter, which was the price paid for caddying the nine-hole course.

I really don't think the pro wanted to practice, and I suspect it was just a build up to get that quarter to me easily.

• • • •

FOR 50 MILES out of Emporia I sought work. The sun beat down with a disheartening intensity.

A long line of trees, strange and welcome havens of cool shade in the midst of a yellow plain of wavering heat, marked the path to a house. As I went up the shaded path, a young lad of about 10 rode by proudly on his pony, saluting me cheerily.

The house was a small one-story affair of yellow paint and indefinite design, but it gained dignity from the trees and a lively friendliness from the children playing in the yard. Three women sat in the rear of the house.

"I'm afraid Paul has all the help he can use," one of the women told me, "but you go up and ask him. In any event, when you come back I want you to have a bite to eat, because we have so much we can't use it all." This to a perfect stranger.

Paul had all the help he needed and I started out of the yard, wondering what I would do now.

"Aren't you going to have something to eat? Mother's expecting you, you know." The question came from one of the little girls playing in the yard.

"That's certainly nice of you," I said, "but I don't think I should bother your mother."

"Oh, but you won't bother her! She's sitting right inside the door. She cooked too much food, and if you don't help us out it will spoil!"

"Well, if that's the way it is——," I said.

I went to the door and the little girl's mother, with the aid of the other women set my place in the dining room. Platter after platter of food was loaded on the table for the trampish looking stranger who had happened to wander by looking for a job.

• • • •

IT IS with an almost reverential wonder that I record that meal. I was turned loose upon heaping platters of cold roast beef, string beans, macaroni and cheese, cold potatoes, a dish of tomatoes and onions, a half-dozen slices of bread, pickled beets, two kinds of cake, preserved peaches and a brimming pitcher of iced tea.

While I ate, the women talked along in the next room about their church affairs, the wheat crop, and the advantages of home-made ice cream. They didn't bother me with questions, and never asked me who I was or where I came from. Occasionally, the tall, smiling woman, who was mother of the children I had seen, would look in to ask if I had everything I wanted.

The children came in from the yard to beg pieces of ice, and were duly rewarded. The warm life in that little farm home maintained its even flow, as if no stranger had been present at all.

It was enough for them that someone had come by with an appetite for the food which they offered so willingly.

I would not now know to whom I am indebted for the most welcome meal I've eaten, if I hadn't noticed the mail box as I turned into the main road. On it was printed: "Paul Stubenhofer, Elmdale, Kans."

Kansans are friendly people!

Lighter Reading.

The trees left standing in the forests which furnish the world with paper must have shuddered when reports reached them of the speech given the American Library Association last week by C. E. Sherman, of the Providence Public Library. Mr. Sherman, proposing "bibliographical birth control," complained that 10,436 books were published in 1936 in this country alone, and suggested that we are producing too many books.

It is a nice point, for in our more serious moods we, as a nation, like to think of the utmost efficiency in everything, forgetting that paradoxically we also exhibit the greatest dislike of that same efficiency. The notion of an ultra-selective list of publications, of nothing but books of the highest literary and informative merit, sounds good at a distance, until we remember that there is still strong magic in stories about a girl and a man and a moon, that pursuing the villain who did three murders in a row is still exciting. We cannot be absorbing facts 24 hours per day; there must be time, too, for what Mr. Sherman calls "dripping love stories" and "Westerns." Why save time at all, with all our efficiency, unless it is to waste it in some pleasurable way?

Konoye Pulls Japan Together

Nation Has Confidence In Its New Leaders.

With the outburst of fighting between Japanese and Chinese troops near Peiping, the attitude of the Japanese government becomes a matter of world-wide concern. The Post presents herewith the first of three articles from its Tokyo correspondent, examining the policies of the new Premier, Prince Konoye.

By Frank H. Hedges,

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

THERE PREVAILS in Japan at the moment a welcome, but almost startling harmony among all elements in the state under the premiership of Prince Fumimaro Konoye that is in sharpest contrast to the bitter friction of more than a year past. The Shakhai Taishuto, Japan's version of a labor party, is the sole exception to this otherwise universal support being given the present government. The Labor group is unwilling to abandon its own program even temporarily, and with its 36 seats in the House of Representatives, will constitute the only opposition when the Diet convenes in extraordinary session on July 23.

This change in mood and temperment in Japan has, of course, a logical explanation. It is not unlike that which prevailed in the United States during the first year of the Roosevelt Administartion.

The nation has faith and confidence in the disinterestedness of Premier Prince Konoye. It knows that he is committed to no particular school of political philosophy, that he favors a strengthening of the powers of the central government in all directions and perfecting national defense, but that he is far too liberal in outlook to take the path trod by a Mussolini or a Hitler. It believes that he will be able to control and reconcile otherwise conflicting groups, and if he does not possess the ability of an Ito or a Yamagata, still it is possible he may develop it and the nation is ready to give him a chance to do so.

No Criticisms Ready Until Program Is Seen.

UNTIL his program becomes more definite in detail none is willing to criticize or attack him. The general outlines of his policy are already clearly perceptible, being those just stated of centralization of power in all fields and of moving steadily forward toward the "semi-wartime basis" of which so much has been heard recently. That such a development is inevitable and necessary seems to be accepted by all groups in the empire—by the militarists, naturally; by the bureaucrats, almost as naturally; by the parties and by private capital in view of what Japan considers its present precarious situation in the world.

That situation is held to be precarious by most Japanese from the dual standpoints of finance-economics and outright military preparedness. Japan has been spending right and left for a half-dozen years past. Simultaneously, it is true, national income has risen and the export trade has made tremendous gains, but neither of these have kept pace with the steadily mounting expenditures, particularly for the defense service. It is recognized that even greater expenditures must be made for the next few years to come, and that therefore the national income must be rapidly enhanced, and the export field offers the only visible opportunity for this latter step.

The War Office at last appears to be aware that such a thing as economics actually exists, and that without a sound economic and financial basis no war can be waged successfully. It is almost willing to trust economic experts to work out such a basis instead of interfering with them, provided always that they do not curtail military and naval appropriations. The magnificent war machine that the Soviet Union has built up in the Russian Far East and the steady growth of military, economic and political strength of the Chinese republic have made that nation a very respectable foe indeed, even should Soviet Russia not intervene on its behalf in the event of armed conflict.

In simpler words, the developments of the recent past, both at home and abroad, have had a most sobering influence on the Japanese people from men high in government office to the ordinary taxpayer. The "crisis" about which Japan has been so fond of talking for the past six years is definitely at hand now, and Japan as a whole is conscious of the fact. The result is that customarily conflicting elements in the state are prepared to sink their differences and to cooperate under the Premiership of Prince Konoye, but always on condition that he does not lean too far in the direction of any one of these elements. If and when he does that, the battle within Japan will be resumed.

Premier Had Refused Leadership Twice Before.

PRINCE FUMIMARO KONOYE, scion of one of the noblest and most respected subject-families of the emperor and president of the House of Peers, had previously refused to accept the Premiership on the grounds of ill health at least twice. It was probably not so much pressure brought to bear on him as the realization that he alone would be acceptable to all elements save Labor, and so bring peace to the Japanese political world, which caused Prince Konoye to agree to become Prime Minister at this time.

The new Premier had no great difficulty in forming his ministry. He had already received the pledge of Gen. Hayashi's ministers of war and navy that they would continue on in his cabinet. He asked and received one minister of state from each of the two great parties, the Mimseito and the Seiyukai, although they are not serving in the cabinet as representatives of those parties. He recalled the veteran Koki Hirota as minister of foreign affairs, and he found his other ministers principally among bureaucrats. Five members of the existing government, including the Premier, have been drawn from the House of Peers; but two from the House of Representatives.

The fundamental policy actuating the Japanese government under the Premiership of Prince Fumimaro Konoye is that of placing Japan on a "semi-wartime basis." This phrase, originated, I believe, by Count Terauchi a little more than a year ago when he was minister of war, gives the impression that Japan is girding its loins to wage battle. That may or may not be true, no outside observer can possibly know. That it is not necessarily true is fully apparent, however.

Japan feels that if it should be attacked today—and it is far from reassured that it it will not be attacked—it is not in the best of condition to carry on a successful war. During the first few years of the present decade, or following the Mukden Incident of September 18, 1931, and the subsequent creation of the Empire of Manchukuo, thanks to Japanese arms, no such sentiment prevailed.

The Japanese army then, dominated by intense nationalism and the extremist views of the "younger element," must have felt itself able to cope with one and all comers.

Otherwise, it would not have defied the Soviet Union by carrying its campaign into north Manchuria, long considereed a special Russian "sphere of influence." Otherwise it would not have almost joyfully walked out of the League of Nations. Otherwise the government in Tokyo would not have denounced the Washington and London naval treaties and so resurrected unrestricted competition in naval armaments and Pacific fortifications. Otherwise it would not have pursued an undoubtedly aggressive policy in China proper which the Nanking government was bound to oppose by force of arms if ever it became strong enough to risk the attempt.

Nation Senses Need For Breathing Spell.

NO SUCH confidence in its own strength is now to be found in the Japanese empire. The pendulum is swinging rapidly in the opposite direction, and the main spring of all Japanese policy at the moment and probably for some years to come will be found in this fact. There is a consciousness in Japan—in the war and navy offices, in the banks and industrial plants, in political circles and even to some extent among the general public—that Japan needs a breathing spell in which to strengthen itself so that it will be ready to meet war if and when war comes.

There may be some elements in the empire which still harbor and cherish the desire to embark upon a campaign of conquest once this strength has been achieved. But it is only fair to report that the great bulk of the nation does not want war at any time and will do much to avoid it. It will do much but not too much. Japan's intense and burning national pride accounts for the high place it has achieved among the nations of the world, but at the same time it is a serious menace to the state, for Japan can brook no insult, or what it considers an insult, to that pride.

This change in outlook, this realization that work must be done at home before the nation is ready to take the field of battle whether in offensive or defensive combat, can be definitely dated from February 26, 1936. It was in the gray dawn of that snowy, wintry day that a handful of junior officers followed blindly by about 2,000 of their men ruthlessly assassinated some of the greatest leaders of Japan, and thought they had established a new military regime directly under the guidance of the throne. They held out until the early afternoon of February 29, and since then most of their leaders have been tried by court-martial and executed, while the high command of the army has striven constantly to eradicate from the minds of its officers and men in ranks the extremist views held by the February rebels.

The nation, as it realized the gravity of the February insurrection, awoke from its first stunned attitude to a realiaztion that there was something wrong in its beloved, almost idolized army, and the saner army leaders grasped the same truth. These saner soldiers have ever since been endeavoring to regain complete control of the officers and men under them, as already stated, and to blot out the extremist theory.

Anti-Red Agreement Aimed To Frighten Soviet.

THIS IS FAR from being the sole indication of the change in attitude of the Japanese army toward its own strength and ability. The conclusion on November 25 of the anti-Comintern agreement with the Hitler government of Germany is another one. Fearful lest the Soviet Union might strike before Japan was prepared to meet the Russian army in battle, Tokyo hoped that this agreement would serve to frighten Moscow into withholding such an attack, affording Tokyo time to build up a far stronger fighting machine than it possesses today. Such logic may seem queer to the rest of the world, but in the meantime there can be no question but that Japan is busily engaged upon the building up of this fighting machine, and that this policy is put forward at the present time.

Around it pivots all other Japanese policy whether financial, diplomatic or what else. In the budget for the current fiscal year, a budget which sets a new high record for the nation, approximately half of the national income goes to the two defense services. In next year's budget these amounts are unquestionably to be increased and in all probability the percentages of the defense service will also be raised.

Secretive by nature, the Japanese are peculiarly sensitive about publishing any information concerning the army and the navy, so that just what is being done in the way of strengthening these two units is not known. The only clear index is the size of the annual appropriations, and, as just indicated, this is a very clear index indeed in the present instance.

In addition to these annual appropriations as in past years (although swollen in size), a five-year plan has been drawn up by the military authorities and is being put into execution. Supposedly this plan is designed with the end of making the Japanese army and navy invincible five years hence. Industrial and all other policies are being shaped to this end. Japan is almost feverishly striving to attain this "semi wartime basis," which has been a popular slogan for more than a year past, and Japan is willing to make great sacrifices to do this.

New Ships to Hurl 2,000-Pound Shells Over 17½ Miles

By the Associated Press.

When the battleships Uncle Sam is going to build let go with all their big guns at once, that will be something for the gobs to write home about.

The tremendous slavos the new 35,000-ton Washington and North Carolina will be capable of firing became apparent yesterday when the Navy's experts disclosed some of the plans for the 16-inch guns with which they will be armed.

Largest and most powerful in the world, nine of these guns will be mounted on each battleship. Each gun will weigh approximtasly 103 tons and will be 54 feet long.

The guns will hurl projectiles weighing more than a ton a distance of 35,000 yards (or 17½ nautical miles), with a muzzle velocity of 3,000 feet per second. The average speed of the projectile until it hits its mark will be 1,200 miles per hour.

1 Smallpox Case In Past 8 Years Is Capital Record

Washington has an outstanding record in its control of smallpox, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. reported yesterday.

During the past eight years only one case has been reported in the District.

But the Nation as a whole, the report stated, has one of the highest smallpox sickness rates "in the civilized world." Classed as a preventable disease, smallpox cases numbered 7,813 in 47 States last year.

Rhode Island, it was pointed out, hasn't had a single case since 1927.

Humidity in New York Brings Early Darkness

New York, July 12 (AP).—Darkness came to New York City and vicinity five hours early today, causing thousands of office lights to be turned on and jamming up traffic.

The Weather Bureau blamed three things for the "low visibility." At 3 p. m., they said a "considerable amount of smoke" plus an unusually high humidity and a low wind velocity accounted for the darkness. They predicted the heat would continue despite showers that followed.

On Peace And Pacifism.

THE SERIOUSNESS of the existing international situation is being admitted by an increasing number of statesmen both here and abroad. Though the dam has not given way, there is rather less optimism than there was some time ago that it will continue to withstand the raging waters. The cracks are widening.

There can be no denying, of course, that the structure of world peace has shown a very remarkable capacity to withstand the stresses and strains to which it has been subjected during the past six years. In earlier decades, any one of such developments as the Japanese invasion of Manchuria, the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, the militarization of the Rhineland and the Spanish civil war might have been sufficient to plunge the world into war. Yet all of them together while they have undoubtedly weakened have not destroyed the peace of the world.

THE QUESTION arises as to just why this was so. It is hardly correct to say that no world war has broken out because no nation wanted such a catastrophe to occur. Some of them, obviously, did not hesitate to pursue such courses as might, under other circumstances, have led to that very result. Nor is it a sufficient answer to point to the fact that the peoples of the world are sincerely eager for peace.

There can be no doubt that they are. Certainly Americans, Englishmen, Frenchmen and the citizens of other democratic lands are desperately anxious to see peace preserved. The fact is no less true of the inhabitants of Soviet Russia. Nor can it be fairly said that any considerable number of Japanese, Germans, Italians want war. They do not.

The fact remains, however, that some of these peoples are under the domination of statesmen and governments which definitely consider war as a useful instrument of policy, have not hesitated to employ it, and may continue to do so.

• • • •

WHETHER enthusiastically or not, the Japanese people were made to fall in line in support of the militarists in the Manchuria, North China and Shanghai campaigns. The Italian people, at first lukewarm to Mussolini's Ethiopian ambitions, certainly did not force the government at Rome to recall its legions from East Africa. And neither the German nor the Italian people have had anything to say regarding the warlike actions of their leaders in Spain.

Post-war pacifism has thus operated unevenly. It has kept pacific governments pacific, and because of the circumstance has encouraged the aggressors. It has not prevented the outbreak of wars of conquest undertaken by strong powers against weak. But by compelling the weak states to give way to the aggressors, the peace sentiment that has been so powerful a factor in popular psychology in democratic lands has unquestionably prevented little wars from developing into big ones.

• • • •

THE POINT is worth examining. Japan's invasion of Manchuria was only feebly resisted by a weak and disorganized China. It was opposed by diplomatic means alone by other nations with interests in the Far East and by the League at Geneva. So no world war developed from the Sino-Japanese conflict. But Japan had its way.

In the case of the Italo-Ethiopian war the League went further than it had during the Manchurian crisis. It imposed severe economic sanctions against Italy. But it carefully avoided making those sanctions severely punitive. The threat by Italy that the imposition of an oil sanction would be regarded as war carried the day. Once again, therefore, the unwillingness of the democratic peoples of the world to get mixed up in war prevented action that might have halted an agressor in his tracks, but might also have led to a general war. It did not prevent the conquest of Ethiopia.

And the same thing happened again when the Spanish civil war broke out. A "little war" was tolerated in order that a big war might be avoided.

• • • •

IN VIEW of these reasons why during these successive crises a major war has been avoided it is difficult to be overly optimistic regarding the outlook for peace in the future.

Soon or late a point is certain to be reached when further retreat in the face of aggressions will become impossible. Post-war peace sentiment is, after all, a relative not an absolute, force. It has never existed in any substantial degree in Japan which did not feel the real impact of the World War and whose history, since 1875, has been an almost unbroken record of successful aggressions. And the peace sentiment in Germany and Italy is always at the mercy of governments that have no use for peace for its own sake.

In Great Britain, France, the United States and many other lands peace is still regarded as a good in itself. In those nations the governments are bound to be influenced and even governed by this widespread feeling. Yet the fact must be recognized that so far as even these nations are concerned there is a limit beyond which the desire for peace does not reach.

• • • •

ONLY A SMALL proportion of people in even the most peace-loving nation believe in complete nonresistance. The great majority everywhere are convinced that a nation must defend itself if attacked.

But this question of defense of a nation's territory is inextricably bound up with the question of defending a nation's interests. Thus it is that statesmen of nations engaged in war always insist that such a war, so far as they are concerned, is defensive, whether the scene of conflict is as remote from the homeland as Kalgan is from Tokyo, Addis Ababa from Rome or Bilbao from Berlin.

Instinctively the peoples of the world recognize that a passive attitude of defense is now insufficient. That is why during the past two years the opposition to the expansion of armaments in Great Britain and France, to cite but two of many available instances, has practically disappeared. Britain's rearmament program has the complete acquiescence of the Labor Party. The Socialists and Communists of France, once bitter opponents of every defense budget, are now strong partisans of the plan to build up the French defense system to the highest possible level.

Now it is clear that neither Great Britain nor France has any desire to make use of the instruments of war they are now forging. But the very fact that they are forging these weapons indicates a readiness to use them if necessary. In other words there is a point beyond which they will not give way to aggressor nations. When that point is reached it will have to be the aggressors that will have to give way. Their willingness to do so is hardly likely to be great if, before this crisis comes, they have been permitted to do as they pleased.

The time to prevent the next world war is before, not after, the next Sarajevo.

The Rotary

By William Lyon Phelps

Its Good Points.

If all the world were like Rotary, there would be no more wars. A Frenchman has just been elected president of International Rotary and he was nominated by a German!

This may be the beginning of a movement described by Sinclair Lewis, who said that if we ever obtain world peace, it will come through the service clubs like Rotary more than through any other agency. Science is as powerless to bring peace as it is to bring salvation.

• • • •

The Rotary convention was held last month at Nice; 14 ocean liners sailing from America in May were largely filled with Rotarians and their families. There were 3,500 delegates from North America, and delegates from all over the world represented about 200,000 Rotarians from 65 different countries. Nine persons came from Hobart, Tasmania. The presidential address was given by Will R. Manier, jr., of Nashville, Tenn., and the president elected for the year 1937-38 is Maurice Duperrey, nominated by Otto Fischer, of Stuttgart, Germany. The new president expressed his appreciation by speaking in six languages.

World Facing 2 Alternatives, Institute Told

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 12.—Barnet Nover, assistant editor of The Washington Post, told the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs today that the world faced the age-old choice between international order and international anarchy.

"The weakening of the League of Nations has enormously increased existing international anarchy," he said, "and yet the League's very existence constitutes a reminder that there is an alternate, and if nations want peace, that alternate must be applied.

"Collective security in theory remains the only effective barrier to war," Nover continued. "The League has no existence outside of its own membership and its powers are not so much those specified in the Covenant but those powers its members are willing to give it. The League is strong whenever the pool of energy voluntarily created by its member nations is great."

Discusses Security.

Samuel McCune Lindsey, professor of social legislation at Columbia University, speaking on "National Insecurity as a Menace to World Peace," said that social security in America was a national problem in an international framework.

"We cannot devise a satisfactory legislative program to give the essential basis of social security unless we control minimum standards between the United States and foreign countries on a uniform basis by international agreements," Lindsey declared.

Sir Herbert Brown Ames, former financial director of the League of Nations Secretariat, told the Institute the rearmament program of the British Empire has grown out of the realization that the League "as an effective instrument for the protection of its members could not be counted on."

"If the British Isles, the overseas dominions and the wide-flung empire are to be kept safe from attack and spoilation, it must be through their own efforts," Sir Herbert said, adding that opportunity to test the loyalty of the League members to the Covenant was provided by Mussolini's decision to invade Ethiopia and the resulting appeal of the Negus to the League.

War Pointless, Thomas Says.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, speaking on "law versus chaos," declared war today is useless, except wars on conquest or of revolution, for they are ended by negotiations at the peace table, and "once the peace table is reached the binding custom of nations burnishes the rules for the settlement."

The war stage is without point, Senator Thomas continued. "There have developed in the world international habits, customs, rules for negotiations, conference consultation and procedure and institutions for the settlement and adjudication of differences. Every one of these conventions is respected when a war is ended and peace is to be made. Is it then merely the dream of a foolish idealist to suggest their use at all times?"

Sir Herbert, who is conducting a round-table conference in international organizations for collective security, told the institute the League started its career under a great handicap. He then traced the influence of world events upon the League from 1919 to 1937.

Six years of comparative peace followed the signing of the Locarno agreements and the entrance of Germany into the League, he pointed out. Meanwhile, Britain allowed her naval and air forces to decline, he added, while other nations continued arming more actively than before.

Hayden Is Speaker.

Dr. Joseph Ralston Hayden, former vice governor and secretary of public instruction of the Philippine Islands, told the institute that no vexing political issue exists between the United States and the Philippine Islands. The chief problems, he pointed out, are economic.

Dr. Anna Lane Linglebach, professor of history in Temple University, asserted that more than 3,000,000 women are now studying world affairs and spreading ideas of world friendship through membership in the General Federation of Women's Clubs. "As time goes on," she said, "we will do more to co-operate with men who are trying to assure the peace and security of the world."

Botwood, what a sudden rise!
Yesterday you might have been
Man or beast or breakfast food—
Now you're on the tongues of men.

Yesterday for all we knew
You were just a shaving soap,
Facial cream or dandruff cure,
Medicine or Chinese dope.

"Botwood? Botwood? What is that?
Can it be some racing horse?"
Might have been the query or,
"Oh, you mean that big divorce?"

"Botwood? Lissen, what's he do?"
Would not have seemed strange at all;
Botwood? Why, it might have been
Just another new golf ball.

Yesterday, for all we cared,
You were just an herb or tree—
Now you're famous as the port
From which airplanes cross the sea.

Foynes? You might have been a shoe,
Brand of cigarette or drink,
Kind of hair oil or a hat
Or another drawing ink.

"Foynes?" the people would have said,
"Yes, I like them with a roast
And they are not very bad
Fricasseed and served on toast."

"Foynes? I've heard that name before . . .
Seen it over shop or store . . .
"Ah! I have it! He's the guy
Who just took the house next door!"

Foynes, you didn't mean a thing,
No one knew of you or cared . . .
Now you're in the daily news—
Botwood's sudden fame you've shared.

Yesterday you were unknown—
You and Botwood unknown stood;
If you were not places you'd
Both be bound for Hollywood!

"Foynes to Botwood! Botwood back!"
Soon will these be common words;
Nerts!
They'll be just two small-time birds.

The superintendent of a New York State insane asylum explains that only about 30 men escape each month and that they are "mostly the quiet type." Staying in a modern asylum is evidently accepted by the officials as proof you are crazy.

Housewife's Parting.

Farewell, good man! No more thy gentle knock at yonder door
Nor any trace of thy moist imprints on my floor . . .
But you should have sensed the end sooner or later;

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Baffled by Erstwhile Devoted Suitor's Failure to Call, Girl Asks What to Believe; What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am now doing something I vowed I'd never do—asking someone else's advice. But my problem juzzles me so that I'm casting all vows aside and coming to you for help. Here is my problem: I had been going with a boy for quite a while until just recently. The last time I saw him was 10 days ago. Since then he has neither called nor been out to see me. I can't understand why.

• • • •

The last time we were out together he was just as attentive as ever; in fact, even more so. He has given me every reason to believe he cares for me. His actions have showed it and he has told me so. There is only one reason I can imagine for his staying away: a week ago I had a birthday and he asked a friend of mine if she thought flowers would be an appropriate gift. She foolishly suggested a more expensive gift.

• • • •

I don't think he makes a very large salary and what she suggested may have been more expensive than he could afford. I do like him a lot and I'd hate to lose such a grand friendship through such a foolish blunder. Do you think this might be the reason? And if so, how shall I remedy it? Please advise me as soon as possible. PUZZLED.

• • • •

The Thing to Do.

DEAR PUZZLED: Why the boy has not returned is as great a mystery to me as it is to you. His unexplained absence might be due to any one of a number of possible causes. He might have lost his job; or be ill; or have been swept off his feet by an unexpected romantic encounter with some other girl; or be nursing his bank account after buying the extravagant gift; or currently of the opinion that you are too expensive for him to squire; or even determinedly resisting what may be your compelling attraction for him. He may not be in a position to marry just now, and he may realize it is a case of breaking off or getting more seriously involved than he had anticipated. Your guess is as good as mine.

• • • •

However, I am convinced of one thing: if he liked you as much as you believe; and if you gave him no offense, he will be back eventually, if only out of curiosity to learn how you weathered his absence and what your reactions were to his provocative conduct. It might be well to make indirect inquiry to reassure yourself that he is not ill or jobless. If misfortune of any kind has overtaken him, go to him at once and assure him of your loyal desire to be helpful. But if he is not in need, let him make the first overt move toward picking up the temporarily broken threads of friendship.

• • • •

The most you can do toward clarifying the situation as it now stands is to effect a seemingly accidental encounter—perhaps on the street near his place of work; at some restaurant where he habitually lunches or dines; or at one of those places of diversion he was won't to frequent with you of evenings. If you run into him, be cordially casual in your greeting, as, for instance: "Why, hello, John! How nice to see you! Have you been ill or something? I haven't seen you around for a while—" as though you classified him as one of your friends, but not the all-important one. If he doesn't respond enthusiastically and enter at once into acceptable explanations of his absence, don't prolong the encounter. Be first to break away. M. H.

• • • •

Student Wants Home.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 19 years of age; a recent graduate of a consolidated high school in a nearby State. My parents died within one week of each other during the influenza epidemic in 1919. I have been reared by one of the most respected couples in our community. For some time I have had the urge to take a course in beauty culture—the work appeals to me very much. I have borrowed the money necessary for the course. My foster parents made many sacrifices to give me a high school education and are financially unable to aid me in this undertaking.

• • • •

I had made all arrangements to secure room and board with a splendid Washington family in exchange for spending my evenings with their small child. Their plans have been upset and at the last minute our arrangements have been canceled. I had already registered at a local beauty school and made the necessary deposit for tuition and equipment. I am unable to pay board while taking the course.

• • • •

Surely there must be some home in this large city where I can secure room and board in exchange for staying evenings with an elderly person, semi-invalid or young children. I can go home week-ends, but that would depend on the wishes of my "benefactor-employer." I have had experience amusing youngsters and have been evening companion to women whose husbands' business necessitated their being away from home. I can furnish splendid character references.

• • • •

I know that my plea does not come within the scope which your column was intended to cover, but will you kindly make an exception for one who must find a way to put over what seems (to her) a huge undertaking? There is no turning back . . . From the bottom of my heart, I thank you for whatever effort you may make to put me in touch with someone who needs such service as I am willing to give and who in turn can give me food and shelter. . . .

Two Smart Harbingers of Fall

Brims rather than crowns are bearing the responsibility for height in fall millinery, as noted in the striking model at left. It is of brown, honey beige, green, yellow, white and purple velvet in a dramatic striped arrangement. Black lace fashions the jacketed dress below, giving the effect of a snug-fitting suit. White touches for midseason wear, may be removed for fall and winter.

Fall Clothes Chic, Simple; Veils Return

Hats Skyrocketing to New Heights; Black Is Best Color.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, JULY 12.—With the opening of the markets here last week, and with buyers from everywhere looking over the fall and winter lines, Washington women will undoubtedly be interested in a few tips about the styles for the oncoming season. Here is a brief discussion of what to expect in your next season's wardrobe:

All fall clothes are smart, unusually flattering, and noted for chic simplicity. Get prepared to wear tall, skrocketing hats again—they have been definitely accepted as a "must" for all occasions. The newer editions however, give the height responsibility to the brims instead of the crowns, as of last winter. And—if your hat doesn't flaunt a veil, you will be ostracized for your lack of fashion knowledge; not just a tiny nose veil either, but a long, scarf-like affair, that adds rhythm and romance to your ensemble.

Black Leads Color Parade.

Black is the leading color, in spite of the promotion and exploitation given brown—although, deep dark browns are considered very important in the general style picture. Jewel colors, a post-coronation influence, have brought purples and reds back into the fashion color chart; the same is true of greens and blues. There is much rust, in both silks and woolens—these are new soft, rich tones, which are generally becoming to women of either light or dark skin and hair.

You will not only look slim but feel streamlined in your new fall clothes. The pencil-like silhouette with a "poured-in" appearance takes precedence over bouffancy and complicated lines. The bustline is long, the skirt length is short, and the sleeves are more flat; if there is shoulder treatment, the tendency is toward flatness. Necklines are both the lowered V and the high affairs, consisting of tiny collars reminiscent of last winter. Drapery is much in evidence; sometimes just the bodice or the skirt is draped, and again, both are given a smart front fullness, by way of chic draping. Cords and tasseis were noted in virtually all of the collections viewed—around necklines, short sleeves and waistlines. Sleeves, by the way, are both long and short, personal preference being the guiding factor.

Frocks Have Jackets.

Almost every frock, whether it is made of silk or wool, has its accompanying jacket. These are usually of the same color as the frock and are either short and form-fitting, or fingertip length and boxy, with flowing sleeves. Many of the suits look like frocks and vice versa; if is all done with jackets! Coats flaunt new materials as well as new contours, and they are the smartest they have been in many seasons. Being so delightfully diversified in silhouette, they give one opportunity for more individuality and a less stereotyped appearance. Coats like dresses for fall and winter, have adopted many feminine mannerisms that reflect the 1900 period; and this period, by the way, is all through the entire fashion picture.

Evening dresses are noted for their uneven hemlines, up in the front and down in the back. They are fashioned of velvet, silk crepe, metal cloth, satin, or net encrusted with paillettes. Many of the dinner dresses have long sleeves or a shoulder-draping treatment; some of the smart black versions are trimmed with brilliant colors by way of metal coth. Fur trimmings are much in evidence, both on suits and coasts; huge collars and large, flat muffs. It is truely going to be a gay and elegant fall and winter, sartorially speaking; with the luxurious fabrics, sparkling accessories and the popular 1900 dramatic influence in styling.

Girls in College Prefer Low Heels, Survey Indicates

College girls have come out flat-footed for low heels. In a recent survey to determine their views on the heel situation, more than 98 per cent of the 2,713 students questioned by teachers of home economics in 49 women's colleges expressed a preference for low or medium elevations at the rear of daytime shoes.

Even on evening footwear the combined low and medium-heel champions totaled almost 50 per cent, a substantial percentage in view of the fact that until recently spike heels were considered an inherent feature of evening shoes.

Increased interest in sports was given as the chief factor in the college girl's inclination toward lower heel heights on daytime shoes but her choice is also influenced by other considerations such as comfort and the suitability of low-heeled footwear to sports clothes. The prevalence of "girls of more than average height" was one of the reasons advanced for the increase popularity of low and medium-heeled evening shoes.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

"Why Not Eat Snails?"

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A great many years ago in this column I advocated the use of broccoli as a healthful food. And later I tried to introduce fennel to a wider audience.

Today I have a new one because I have been eating snails, and I want the whole world to try this delicacy. I am painfully aware of the prejudice against them in America, and it will probably be a long time before we can serve snails in this country ,unless we import them from France.

But there is no more reason why we should have a prejudice against snails than we do about oysters or clams. They are the same kind of food. And snails are cleaner and more hygienically raised for market than oysters.

Naturally since I have been eating snails I am in Paris, and I learned here how they are "fattened" for the table. The snails I ate were four years old, specially selected.

Snail farming is done mostly in the eastren part of France, in the wine country. The snails are caught in the fields after a day of rain. They are put into little enclosures where delicate young lettuce and radishes are growing. They feed on these leaves, not mulberry leaves as is popularly supposed.

When they have eaten all the food in the first enclosure, a little gate is opened which leads into another enclosure. Here a more delicate type of lettuce and radishes are growing and the snails all move into their new home. This goes on over and over again, one garden after another being opened to them, each with more and more delicate and richer food. No wonder their flesh is so delicate and tasty.

From November to February they sleep. They do no feeding. During this time they are put into a little garden with moss growing in profusion, and the snails dig into this for their long winter's nap. The only thing they eat is occasionally a grain of sand.

In May they are not gathered for market because that is the egg-laying season.

Their flesh is indescribably delicate and tender. They are very digestible and, like oysters, for the reason that you are eating the whole animal, including the liver, you get a good deal of vitamin and hormone. I hope somebody will start snail farming in the United States soon.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'M FED UP," writes Mary R, "with recipes that take half the morning to fix and schedules for tossing off the entire housework in about a half hour. It all sounds so glamorous and easy. But just try and do it when you have graduated in just a few years from school to a busy household with a couple of children to keep right-side up, and all the work to do. I'll feel like a howling success if I just survive.

"It isn't that I don't love my home because I do. And I like to have things as nice as possible, but I simply haven't the time nor the money for anything that isn't practical.

"Take my interior decorating, for instance. I have to think first of durability and upkeep before I think of colors and designs. Maybe that sounds like sacrilege to a decorator, but it won't to the mother of a growing family with a house that's lived all over.

The Problem.

"Here's my problem just now—our old taupe mohair sofa is in the market for a new cover and I'm getting new curtains for the living room. We have a good Wilton rug, figured but mostly blue, and the walls are papered in an indistinct scenic in creamy tones with the pattern in a lightish red, that's not at all pronounced on the wall. One easy chair is taupe and while it doesn't look like much, it is still in good condition, so I think I'd better let well enough alone there. The other big chair needs a new cover and I had in mind a slip cover. Two smaller arm chairs with wood frames have blue tapestry covers. Of course, I'd like to make this room look as attractive as possible, and would deeply appreciate your suggestions, keeping in mind the limitations mentioned above."

Color Doesn't Cost Extra.

Don't we know what Mary R. is up against, though? But still a little color doesn't cost anything extra and can be just as practical as drabness. We'd have the sofa in a dark red covering — brocatelle, if she's having it upholstered, rep or denim if she's making a slip cover for it. Then why not flowered slip covers for both the other big chairs—something washable and brightly colorful with a ground tone that won't show dirt easily. Maybe a flat weave printed mohair would be the thing because it's so practical and washes beautifully.

We think that Mary R.'s room then would stand the gaff very nicely and still do a lot to keep her feeling crisp and chipper toward the world. As for the curtains, cream lace net in a small dot or design would be a good idea if she feels that stretching curtains is easier than ironing them. We generally do. But if she doesn't mind ironing, why not natural pongee? That would take the place of both curtains and draperies and blend nicely with the rest of the room.

Schiaparelli Offers A Slim Silhouette

Paris (U.P.)—The new Schiaparelli silhouette is slim and svelt, giving an impression of height. Hats are tall with wide, upturned brims posed at a daring angle on one side of the head. Daytime skirts are a trifle shorter, but still give an illusion of height because of their slim cut.

Schiaparelli launches a long slim box coat which hangs loose but close to the body and comes to below hip length. There are two evening silhouettes—the youthful dance dress of crisp mousseline, which is made with a short, extremely bouffant skirt, and the slim, sophisticated gown in soft, clinging materials.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 12.

IT IS STRANGE to realize that we New Yorkers, benighted though we may be, occasionally have our pillar of clouds by day; pillar of fire by night. These scriptural phenomena are part of the lives of those of us condemned to the metropolis during the hot weather. They are not divine manifestations, but purely a man-made proposition. Occasionally looking across to the Long Island shore from our lofty apartment windows, we see a huge mountain of smoke hanging on the lifeless air. When we do, we say, "Well, there it is again. Up goes some more boardwalk"—and it is even so.

ALICE HUGHES.

New York's submerged tenth practically has its summer being on or beside the boardwalks which line our crowded beaches. There must be at least 100 miles of boardwalk along the Long Island shore, compromising such popular hangouts as Coney Island, Long Beach, and the Rockaways. These promenades, in spite of their proximity to the sea, are very dry, and are apt to go up at the drop of a lighted match. Seldom is a human being injured in these conflagrations. But each one customarily consumes a bathhouse, a few shooting galleries and several of those beaverboard beach bungalows.

• • • •

While the blazes are on, the adjacent beaches are filled with peoples who always seem to enjoy a good fire. This year, history is already running strictly true to form. July had barely come blistering in when a whole square block of boardwalk and cottages went up in smoke at crowded Rockaway Beach. It made an awe-inspiring sight from the rooftops of mid-town Manhattan and brought 40 fire engines to delight the eyes of hundreds of thousands of beachbathing citizens. And somehow our citizens never seem to learn. They are always careless with cigarette stubs and lighted matches—and up go the boardwalks! Midsummer fun in New York!

• • • •

Every now and then New York comes to grips with Nature in a helpless way. We know how to cope with skyscrapers and mass humanity and big business rackets and world fairs But an invasion of a few squirrels, for example, makes a shambles of our lives. By "our," we mean the distinguished family of Hampton Ewing, whose home in Yonkers, on the northern outskirts of New York City, is being terrorized by 12 squirrels. To such an extent that Mr. Ewing, who is a big-city lawyer, and whose father was a general in the Union Army, has had to throw himself upon the mercy of the police department. In my day back home, this is the kind of assignment a police department would have scorned. But a gang of small boys—to them it would have been pure pleasure to rout those squirrels. Aren't there any small boys in your neighborhood, neighbor Ewing?

• • • •

Well, New York women are practically uniformed in a costume of black silk jersey nowadays. The fabric is light; it drapes softly; seems to look well on all figures. The particular models are, for the most part, inspired by Alix, the great French designer with whom I find fault. Alix is practically an untouchable. Not only here but also in her native Paris, where she, Vionnet, Schiaparelli and Molyneux are easily the four leading pedestals of the needle trade. Nonetheless, I shall maintain that two many of Alix's draped-front dresses look half-finished. In front they are soft, gracious, suitable for afternoon occasions. In the back they are as severe as a prison matron's uniform. The back and the front seem not to belong to each other. Can't we have a few tucks, gathers or drapes across the back?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Edwina Atwell, most photogenique of our society debutantes since Dorothy Fell, is the camera men's pet. Her pretty face is splashed all over everywhere, because she goes everywhere and looks well in and out clothes. The rumor is that by the fall she may be photographed in wedding finery, for though out only three months, this lovely lass has already narrowed her attentions down to one lad, Phil Fell, brother to Dorothy . . . A wave of midsummer imitators of Elsa Maxwell are springing up in the form of hostesses giving parties at which guests are invited to come as someone other than themselves. But without the resourceful Elsa to guide the clever choice of costumes, originality palls.

Golf Overrated As Medium in Paring Weight

By Carolyn Abbott.

BY THIS TIME of year, most men's thoughts have turned to golf. This game gets him out into the open, is a good tonic and, if he plays long enough and hard enough, it will reduce his weight.

The main difficulty is that a man is too likely to overestimate his game of golf as exercise. In playing 18 holes of golf, a man walks from 4 to 5 miles. If he walks at the rate of 1½ miles an hour, he burns 1.21 calories per pound an hour. If he hurries his game, so he completes it in two hours, for the weight of 160 pound, he will burn 192 calories per hour or about 384 calories for the 18 holes.

The number of calories used per stroke will add very little to the number used in walking.

Easy to Add Weight.

It is an easy matter to take on more calories than you use in activity and thus gain weight. Excess abdominal weight is liable to shorten your life by a few years. It has been found, more than once, that a man's beltline is his lifeline.

A man's healthy waistline is 5 inches less than the chest circumference. Golf affords plenty of arm and leg exercise, but occasional waistline twist will not keep the muscles of the abdomen strong and healthy. Of all of a man's muscles those of the abdomen are the most important.

Exercises Muscles.

Lie flat on the back on the floor, knees flexed and soles of feet on the floor. Contract the stomach muscles until this region is flat.

Extend the feet until the knees are straight and the heels are about 2 inches from the floor. Then gradually, holding the feet together, raise the legs until they form an angle of about 27 degrees with the floor. Lower the legs slowing to within 2 inches of the floor and again raise to the angle. Relax, return to original position and rest.

Repeat the exercise three times. As the muscles become stronger, increase the number of times you perform the exercise.

Try to have the abdomen flat throughout the movement.

Irregular Hemline Enhances Charms

Hollywood—Howard Shoup, movie designer, predicts another kind of evening silhouette to vie with the soft linens. This has an uneven hemline. The skirt will be rounded out over the front of the legs like a cutaway coat; just covering the knees. Then the skirt will sweep off to the back, touching the floor. The general silhouette will be slim with slightly higher waistline than we have been seeing lately. Any girl who aspires to coquetry will see the possibilities in the trend Shoup predicts because there is more beauty to a half-hidden leg than to a completely hidden or completely exposed one. This will be lovely in the plain materials like slipper satin and velvet accented with plenty of costume jewelry.

Court Fight Lures Society and Notables to Capitol Hill

Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Hull Evince Keen Interest in Epic Battle in Senate; Homer Croy, Novelist, Also Spectator.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

With attention now turned on the court fight, Capitol Hill has become the center of social as well as legislative activity. These days, just about everyone who's still in town braves the heat to get up to Congress. Galleries of both the House and Senate—which, incidentally, are about the coolest spots in town—are filled, not only with tourists but with social celebrities.

Among interested spectators at the Senate yesterday were Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who spent more than two hours listening in on the hammer-and-tongs Supreme Court debate. Also among the gallery visitors was Homer Croy, widely known novelist and scenario writer, of New York and Hollywood, who arrived in Washington Sunday, stayed on The Hill yesterday long enough to gather atmosphere and check up on facts for a chapter in his latest book, and left town last night.

Working on Chapter Set in Congress

Mr. Croy, who is author of "West of the Water Tower," "They Had to See Paris," and a number of short stories and books that have been made into motion pictures, recently has been working on a novel, "Sixteen Hands," containing a chapter laid in the House of Representatives. With the book scheduled for publication in October, the author came to Washington to make a final check on the background, and then was out of town before many persons knew he was here.

He did find time, however, to call on some of his friends in the House Office Building, including Representative Charles J. Colden, of California, who helped him on the chapter in question. And he spent a couple of hours in the gallery of the House, listening in—"for atmosphere," he said—and then went over to the Senate gallery for a brief "look in" on the Supreme Court fight.

Later, back in Representative Colden's office, he said he had found the material he wanted, but declined to divulge what it was. His only comment was "Congress is saner, at least, than Hollywood."

Says Hollywood Is "Much Maligned"

Leaving for New York last night, he will spend several weeks there before going back to Hollywood. Incidentally, he mentioned that a number of film officials had evinced an interest in "Sixteen Hands," and that chances were it would be made into a film.

Briefly discussing his Hollywood experiences—he has spent several years there writing scenarios—he said filmland and film figures "are much maligned. Sure the town's crazy," he went on. "And so are lots of the people out there, but they're interesting just the same. I like Hollywood."

He plans to take his family back to California to spend the winter. His wife now is in New York, and his only daughter, Carol Croy, is spending the summer in a camp in Tuxedo, N. C.

Before Mr. Croy left, he mentioned he had talked briefly with Representative Colden regarding the latter's recently introduced bill—H. R. 7005—"to end poverty in America and to achieve the Utopian dream." This bill, by the way, seems to have created much interest on the Hill, since it provides a plan to inaugurate a permanent Government policy of cooperative enterprises and subsistence homesteads to rehabilitate the unemployed.

Mrs. Colden Studies Welfare Systems Abroad

While Representative Colden is pushing the bill, his wife is making a detailed study of co-operatives in Scandinavian countries, where they have been successful. She now is in Norway, where she has a number of relatives and where she is being widely entertained when she can find time from the program she has outlined for herself. When she arrived in Bergen, Norway, the American consul met her and took her on a personally conducted tour of the city, pointing out reasons that co-operatives there are so successful.

In Alesund, Norway, Mrs. Colden also had an expert guide in her cousin, who is editor of a labor newspaper. Later, after an extended visit to Oslo, Honefoff and Stravenger, she will go to Denmark and Sweden to continue her unofficial survey.

Later, by way of vacationing, she will travel through Germany, France and Austria, and be in Budapest for a woman's meeting in the latter part of the sumer. She is expected to return to Washington in September and if Congress has closed by then she will go on to her home in California.

Party July 29 Busies Egypt's Legation Staff

Capital Will Turn Out to Celebrate Coronation of King Farouk.

By Dudley Harmon.

Members of the Egyptian legation staff are as busy as bumble bees these hot days. They're hard at work checking and double-checking social lists, and looking into the catering situation for the reception they will give Sunday evening, July 29, in honor of the coronation of youthful King Farouk of Egypt.

Two coronations within three months will have made this a banner year socially for Washington diplomats, who usually have to content themselves simply with celebration of the birthday of their monarchs, presidents or dictators. July 29 will furnish the Egyptians with a double-barreled excuse for a real bang-up party, for that date also happens to be the birthday of the new king. He will be 18 years old.

Lavish is the word for entertaining at the Egyptian legation, where parties are invariably packed and jammed. Getting anywhere near the loaded buffet is always a struggle, and at the forthcoming reception undoubtedly it will be even more so. We can safely predict the new monarch's health will be toasted that evening in the choicest of champagne and that the gourmets among the guests will find the usual elaborate Egyptian pastries which are a feature of parties at the legation.

Rites to Resemble Our Inaugural

Although this reception will be sumptuous without a doubt, the coronation itself of King Farouk will be comparatively simple. Egypt has no real crown, just a figurative one; so the flashing jewels and solid gold which made the crowning of King George so dazzling will be missing in Cairo. As a matter of fact, the ceremony resembles somewhat our own inaugural, and the Egyptian King takes his oath of office in the Parliament Building. The only glamour will be furnished by the picturesque white silk headdresses of Arab chiefs and the red turbans of the Egyptians.

The young King, already beloved by the people because of his democratic demeanor and his engaging smile, has had some experience with coronations. He journeyed to London in May to watch the great preparations going on there, although the tradition which forbids the ceremony to be watched by other reigning monarchs prevented his presence at Westminster Abbey.

Farouk was received by former King Edward a day or two after the death of King Fuad. The young monarch was making preliminary studies in England preparatory to entering the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, but his father's sudden death put a precipitate end to his plans, and he returned immediately to Egypt.

Charge d'Affaires To Be Host at Party

Many people, if they think of the matter at all, have a vague idea the present king of Egypt is descended from a long line whose members include Cleopatra and the pharaohs. As a matter of fact, Farouk owes his throne to Mohamed Ali the Great, who kept a little shop until his maneuverings obtained for him the supreme position in his country. Later he established his family as hereditary rulers of Egypt.

Among the thousands of congratulatory messages which King Farouk will read July 29 will be a cable from the Friends of Egypt, a society founded in Washington two years ago by Representative Ralph Brewster and former Representative Fred Britten. They always send a cablegram to the young King on his birthday.

Anis Azer, Charge d'Affaires of the legation during the Minister's absence in Egypt, will be host at the party.

Son Born to Kellers.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip P. Keller, of 2901 Connecticut avenue, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son who arrived Friday morning at Garfield Memorial Hospital. Mr. Keller is advertising manager of the George Radio Co.

Miss Joyce Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas Joyce announce the engagement of their daughter, Grace Ann Joyce, to Charles Windsor Miller, of Dayton, Ohio, and Washington. Miss Joyce is a graduate of Immaculata Seminary.

Comdr. O'Connor, Wife Honor Guests Of Capt. Johnson

Capt. Harvey F. Johnson, U. S. C. G., and Mrs. Johnson entertained at a farewell party last evening at the Columbia Country Club for Commander and Mrs. Octavus O'Connor, who are leaving Thursday for Michigan. From there they will go to New London, Conn., where Commander O'Connor will be instructor in engineering at the Coast Guard Academy.

Guests last evening included Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, and Mrs. Waesche; Capt. and Mrs. William Munter, Capt. and Mrs. Roger Weightman, Capt. and Mrs. Leroy Reinberg, Commander and Mrs. William Derby, Commander and Mrs. Milton Daniels and Mr. H. H. Walker, of Baltimore, father of the hostess.

Greenwoods Leaving.

Representative and Mrs. Arthur H. Greenwood will leave by motor Saturday for their home in Washington, Ind., where Mrs. Greenwood expects to remain until autumn. Representative Greenwood will return to the Capital to stay until Congress adjourns and will be at the Roosevelt.

Visit Bangor, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frank are spending some time in Bangor, Me.

Miss Doughton Leaves Tonight

Legislator's Daughter Will Make First Trip to West Coast.

One by one Congressional wives and daughters are calling quits on staying in the Capital until the legislative session is closed for the season. Joining the exodus will be Miss Reba Doughton, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, who will leave tonight for her first trip to the West Coast.

En route she will visit in Chicago and Denver, Colo., and then she will go on to Geneva, Nebr., to spend several days as the guest of Mrs. Ben Koehler, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Finis J. Garrett. Later, she expects to continue on to California. Her trip, originally planned to start Sunday evening, had to be delayed a couple of days because of the difficulty in getting train reservations to Chicago. Miss Doughton expects to return to Washington in September if Congress still is in session. Otherwise, she will go to her home in Laurel Springs, N. C., returning to Washington when Congress convenes again.

At Atlantic City.

Miss de Peyster attended Miss Chapin's School and made her debut in 1931. Mr. von Raits is the son of the late Col. Juan Alexander von Raits, of the Austrian army, and the late Mme. von Raits. He attended the University of Vienna and now is in business in New York.

Congressional Women To Mark Club's Birthday

Past Presidents, Charter Members and Incorporators Will Join in Thirtieth Anniversary Celebration.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The Congressional Club, whose membership is composed of wives of members of Congress, will observe next spring its thirtieth anniversary. A celebration is being planned to which all past presidents, charter members and incorporators will be invited.

All except one of the past presidents are living. Mrs. James Perkins, first president, resides in Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, who now heads the club and is also from New York State, plans to call on her there this summer and discuss the early days of the club. Mrs. Reed is the third president from New York, Mrs. Charles Ward having been the other from that State.

Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Richard Duncan, the club secretary, despite the summer heat, are in the midst of outlining the club's winter program. While other congressional wives have left the Capital for their homes or the cool comfort of mountain and beach resorts, they have been conferring on teas, luncheons, dances and receptions for the opening weeks of the season.

With these practically all scheduled, Mrs. Reed will leave for her home in Dunkirk, N. Y., Thursday, and Mrs. Duncan for her home in St. Joseph, Mo., later in the week.

Busy Schedule Is Planned

When Congress reconvenes (that is, if this session finally ends), the wives of new members will find a series of activities at the Congressional Club designed as a welcome for them and and a reunion for those who are returning to the Capital.

The opening affair at the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue will be a buffet supper for the young people on December 31, which is an annual New Year's Eve party. On New Year's Day, on which there was formerly a formal reception, there will be instead, a tea dance from 5 to 8 o'clock for members and invited guests.

The first Friday in January, the Initial Friday afternoon tea will be given to which all members eligible to club membership will be invited. On January 18, the first dinner bridge of the season will take place and, on January 24, the first matinee bridge luncheon. The following night, January 25, the opening dinner dance of the season is scheduled.

A new feature next year, will be a monthly party for the associate members, either a supper or dinner dance, which they will arrange themselves. The first is to be on January 29. The associate members are daughters and daughters-in-law of members of Congress. Formerly only daughters were admitted as associate members but, as some of the Congressional delegation had no daughters but had married sons provisions was made this year to include the daughters-in-law also.

Clubhouse To Be Decorated

The clubhouse, which has recently been equipped with a new fire escape, is to be redecorated this fall in preparation for the opening of the winter season. Mrs. John Taber, of New York, is chairman of the house committee. Other committee chairmen include Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, chairman of membership; Mrs. Ralph Church, chairman of entertainment; Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, of printing; Mrs. Dow Harter, of publicity; Mrs. Will Rogers, of the dinner bridge parties; Mrs. John Dempsey, of the dinner dances; Mrs. Lloyd Thurston, of the constitution, and Mrs Otha Wearin, of the cook book.

The Congressional Cook Book was first issued in 1927, and through the sale of the first edition $25,000 was realized, with which the clubhouse was repaired, redecorated and refurnished. The second edition was brought out in 1931, and a steady sale of the book has been maintained since. It contains recipes contributed by the wives of members of Congress. A special secretary is kept by the club to handle its cook book business throughout the year.

Serving with Mrs. Wearin on the cook book committee are Mrs. John Overton, of Louisiana; Mrs. James P. Pope, of Idaho; Mrs. Milton A. Romjue, of Missouri; Mrs. Hampton P. Fulmer, of South Carolina; Mrs. John A. Martin, of Colorado; Mrs. Gerald Boileau, of Wisconsin; Mrs. Frank C. Kniffen and Mrs. E. Laurence Imhoff, both of Ohio; Mrs. Thomas J. O'Brien, of Illinois; Mrs. David D. Terry, of Arkansas; Mrs. Don Gingery, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Scott M. Lucas, of Illinois; Mrs. Joe Starnes, of Alabama; Mrs. John R. Murdock, of Arizona, and Mrs. H. Jerry Voorhis, of California.

Officers From Many States

Officers of the club, in addition to Mrs. Reed, are Mrs. Otis S. Bland, of Virginia; Mrs. Harry Engelbright, of California; Mrs. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi; Mrs. Joe L. Smith, of West Virginia, and Mrs. William H. Larrabee, of Indiana, vice presidents; Mrs. Duncan, recording secretary; Mrs. Karl Stefan, of Nebraska, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, treasurer.

Mrs. Ernest W. Roberts, of Massachusetts, who served as president from 1913 to 1915, is the only past president of the club who is deceased. Others who have served as its head include Mrs. Perkins and Mrs. Ward, Mrs. A. W. Gregg, of Texas; Mrs. Duncan W. Fletcher, of Florida; Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, of Ohio; Mrs. Horace M. Towner, of Iowa; Mrs. Irvine L. Lenroot, of Wisconsin; Mrs. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey; Mrs. James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina; Mrs. Lindley H. Hadley, of Washington; Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, of Rhode Island; Mrs. Porter H. Dale, of Vermont; Mrs. Leonidas C. Dyer, of Missouri; Mrs. Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, and Mrs. William M. Whittington, of Mississippi.

Mrs. B. C. Kennedy Honored by Club

Given Book by Members of Chevy Chase Group.

Mrs. B. C. Kennedy, retiring president of the Chevy Chase (D. C.) Garden Club, yesterday morning was presented with a book as a gift from the members in appreciation of her work as head of the club for the past season. It was appropriately, "A Thousand and One Garden Questions Answered," by Alfred Hottes.

The club met at the home of Mrs. Lewis Pendleton, with 30 present. Mrs. E. N. Bunting outlined the possibilities and advantages of rock gardens, stressing evergreens and early flowering bulbs.

At the close of her talk, she gave the members a comprehensive list of plants suited to this climate.

The hostess served refreshments, assisted by Mrs. Henry Wirgman, Miss Mary Davis and Mrs. Stuart Wirgman. The next meeting of the club will be the second Monday in August.

Mrs. Pettengill Will Speak at Tokyo Conclave

Head of National Parent-Teacher Group Recently in Capital.

MRS. J. K. PETTENGILL, of Detroit, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, who was recently in Washington, will be among the American speakers at the World Federation of Education Associations biennial convention in Tokyo, August 1 to 7. She sailed a week ago from Cancouver, B. C., on the Japanese ship Hiye Maru.

Sailing from Canada instead of American caused Mrs. Pettengill to encounter a little last-minute difficulty in having her passport visaed for entry to Japan and China, where she will study the educational systems. She also had to promise the State Department not to enter Spain before it would issue her passport.

Her itinerary in the Orient includes trips to Manchuria and Korea. She will visit Kove, Yokohama, make a trip to the Forbidden City, and an automobile excursion to the great wall of China. She will spend part of a day in Mukden, and three days in Peiping. On the return trip she will sail from Yokohama and will stop over in Honolulu for a day as the honor guest of the Hawaii Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Pettengill is the ranking American delegate to the convention of the Interantional Federation of Home and School, which is being held in conjunction with the eduaction conclave.

Her address in Tokyo to the general session of the World Federation of Education Associations convention will be on the topic, "Parents and Teachers Look at Modern Education."

"Modern education," Mrs. Pettengill points out, "is attempting two things: To build a child as a person whose abilities must be developed to establish his individuality, and treat a child as a citizen who must fit into the democratic society into which he has been born. The child although helped into individual achievement by his education must be taught to subordinate his wishes to the welfare of the whole."

To Meet Wednesday.

The Capital City Club will have its next meeting the evening of July 14. Mrs. Lillian Martin was hostess at the session last month at which Mrs. Ethel Graves was admitted to membership.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

WASHINGTON MEMBERS of Alpha Chi Omega are pleased over the election of Mrs. William G. Donald, of Berkeley, Calif., as national president of the sorority. Mrs. Donald was here for a week as the guest of Mrs. James T. Jardine at the time the chapter was installed at American University, and has many friends in the Capital. Mrs. Jardine is the Alpha Chi Omega delegate to the city Pan-Hellenic Congress.

• • • •

MRS. HUGH BUTLER, who is one of the city's prominent club women, has left the Capital for the summer—but hasn't gone far away. She and Mr. Butler are spending the season at Arlington Hall. They have been joined by their daughter, Rosemary, who has been attending San Luis School and Camp in Colorado Springs, where she expects to return in the fall.

• • • •

THE PHI DELTA GAMMAS had a surprise Sunday evening at the buffet supper given by Mrs. Frederick Crocker, president of Alpha Chapter, in honor of Dr. Margaret Sebree, new national president—they discovered one of their sorority sisters had just been married and she was there at the party.

The wedding took place June 26, and, until Sunday, the former Miss Ora Ethel Cage, who now is Mrs. Allen Hendrick Rowlett, had kept it a secret, so far as most of her Washington friends were concerned. Her marriage took place in Richmond at the home of the bridegroom's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Rowlett, and the couple left immediately for a wedding trip to Norfolk and Virginia Beach, from which they returned only a few days ago. They now are making their home at the Rhode Island Apartments.

• • • •

OTHER Phi Delta Gammas of the local chapters are off on vacations but, to the best of the knowledge of their sorority sisters, there are no more wedding announcements forthcoming. May Pendleton sailed on the Rotterdam for a cruise to Norway and Sweden. Marjorie Webster, of the Marjorie Webster School, and her mother sailed Saturday on the Georgic for a European tour.

Grace Gowens is down at the Texas Centennial Exposition, in charge of the Bureau of Standards exhibit. It is the fourth time, incidentally, that she has represented the Government in such a capacity. Twice in Chicago and another time in Central America, she had charge of such exhibits.

• • • •

ANOTHER SORORITY member who is doing interesting things this summer is Mrs. Earle Packer, wife of the First Secretary of the American Legation in Riga, Latvia. She went to Soviet Russia for a vacation, attending the May festival in Moscow, and later spending three weeks in Crimea. She and Mr. Packer left Washington last fall.

Hazel Faegans, registrar at the American University Graduate school, starts Friday by auto for the Pacific Coast. She will go out by the Southern route and return through the Canadian Rockies, including all the national parks of the West in her itinerary.

• • • •

THE PHI DELTA GAMMAS, as you may have gathered by this time, are a traveling group this summer—or rather a group of individual travelers, for they are not "tripping" en masse. Arline Dufour, a teacher of English at Western High School, is spending her vacation at Cape Cod. Emily T. Ford, teacher of English at Eastern High School, is at home in Kentucky for the summer. Grace Johnson, who teaches history at Central High School, is on a motor trip through the Great Smokies. She doesn't spend all her time in her automobile, however. She is a sturdy mountain climber and last year climbed Mount Rainier to act as bridesmaid in a wedding at its summit.

Elsie Racstraw, with her mother, has just returned from two weeks in New York City—and for the present that's all we know about the whereabouts of the Phi Delta Gammas.

Alphonse Leemans, Bride Return Here

Alphonse Leemans, former George Washington University football star and a member of the Giants team and his bride, the former Miss Theodora Rinaldi, of Sligo Park Hills, Md., returned last night from their wedding trip.

They were married June 12 at Silver Spring, Md., and have been on a Western motor trip. They spent most of the time in Superior, Wis., Mr. Leeman's former home, visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leemans. Many parties were given in their honor. The couple shortened their trip to attend the wedding of Mrs. Leeman's sister, Miss Virginia Rinaldi, and Mr. J. Stanley Russell, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Leemans will live at the Rinaldi home until September when they will leave for New York.

The H. R. Grahams Traveling in South

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Robert Graham, who were married Saturday, are in the South on a wedding trip, and after August 1 will be at home at 1725 New Hampshire avenue. The bride is the former Jeannette Mae Chamberlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moulton Chamberlin.

Only immediate members of the families witnessed the wedding, which took place in St. Matthew's rectory. Mrs. Blanche Potter was matron of honor and Mr. Joseph Wilkins was best man. The bride wore a white crepe ensemble with a corsage of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

The Blue Triangle Club of young business women has called a special meeting at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow, which is Bastille day, summer conference planning committee.

The Business Girls of the Y. M. C. A. have planned a program for tomorrow, which is Bastille day. They will meet in the roof garden for a "Sing," featuring French songs. The French Embassy is assisting in decorations.

The religious life committee will meet July 15 at 7:30 p. m. in the board room of the Y. W. C. A., at Seventeenth and K streets, with Dr. Anne Seesholtz, chairman, presiding.

Mrs. James Anderson will act as hostess to the Wednesday Club at lunch at 614 E street. The group will be taken on a sightseeing tour following the luncheon.

'Toy Truck Lady' Drafts Code For Mothers of Doll Babies

Miss Russell, of Juvenile Court, Will Begin Distribution of Her Stock in Navy Place Alley on Friday.

AN ADOPTION CODE for mothers of doll babies has been drawn up by Miss Etta Mai Russell, of the Juvenile Court—the Toy Truck Lady.

Miss Russell will start the actual distribution of toys this Friday. Her largest stock so far is in dolls and these will be loaned with the privilege of adoption at the end of six weeks if they have had proper care.

The advent of the Toy Truck will not be sudden and unexpected in Navy Place alley, first of the slum districts which will be served under the toy-lending plan sponsored by the Women's Council of the Federation of Churches at Miss Russell's suggestion. For several weeks, she and coworkers from the Federated Church Women have been preparing the way among the prospective young patrons.

Discuss Proper Care of Toys

They have gone to Navy place, gathered a few little boys and girls about them and told stories—some just for fun and some with lessons in them. They have talked about toys after the stores have drawn an audience.

"What would you have to do if someone let you have a toy to play with and you then had to return it?" Miss Russell asked. "Take good care of it and return it just like I got it," was the prompt response from one small child.

Of the little girls she asked "What does a good mother do for her baby?—for they must prove they can be good mothers to their dolls before they adopt them permanently. From their own answers, some of them written out, she has formulated the following code to which little mothers of doll babies must subscribe:

A good mother keeps her baby clean.

I promise to be a good mother to my baby doll.

Last week, while Miss Russell was talking to the children about care of their dolls, several mothers of the neighborhood joined the circle, holding their own babies in their arms. As she talked, Miss Russell observed three of them leave quietly and return a short time later, with their children, whose faces had been washed, their hair combed and dresses changed to clean ones. Whether it was the result of the discussion of care of children or just a gesture of appreciation for the presence of the friendly visitor, Miss Russell did not know, but she was gratified at the evidence that the influence of the Toy Truck would reach beyond the children to the adults.

Sewing Basket Is One Request

Several of the little girls stressed the necessity for sewing clothes for their "babies," and one expressed the desire for a sewing basket. Mrs. E. C. Dinwiddie, of the Lutheran Church will be in charge of teaching the little mothers how to make dresses for their dolls and, if the grown-up mothers of Navy place alley indicate a desire to have similar instructions, the Federated Church women will find a way to meet this need.

Mrs. W. Rex Fur and a group of other women from the Southern Methodist Church of Clarendon have already inaugurated a program of games, handwork and music. Tuesdays and Fridays are the days of the visits to the alley. Mrs. Ellie Cook, of the Church of the Brethren, with the assistance of other women of her denomination, has provided a window box for every house in Navy place. The immediate effect of the flower boxes was the washing of the windows behind them.

The Toy Truck cannot wait any longer to move, for the summer is progressing. Miss Russell had hoped to have a greater variety of toys than she has with which to start, but, as in other such projects she has inaugurated, she will begin with what she has and trust to the generosity of public-spirited citizens to supply further needs. There are at present toys for the younger children, both boys and girls, but the older ones, too large for scooters and simple games, will leave the Toy Truck in disappointment if such things as roller skates and bicycles are not available—"and the older boys are our greatest concern," said Miss Russell. "They are the ones we need most to reach and interest through our contact with them."

Hopes for Second Hand Bicycles

"There must be in Washington people who have old bicycles they no longer use, stored away in attic or garage. We will call for these, have them repaired and use them if people will only let us know. Roller skates too are much needed for the older boys."

Miss Russell hopes to have at least a few of the articles which are play equipment for boys from 12 to 15 before she makes her first round with toys on Friday. Otherwise, she expects to feel like a Santa Claus who has remembered only part of the children in the neighborhood.

The toys will be distributed as are library books, with cards issued for two week's use. The Toy Truck patrons will learn to care for their playthings for, if they are not returned in good condition, the penalty will be to get no more for the time being at least.

The value of the work to make life brighter for the little children in the slums is not only in serving this purpose, Miss Russell points out, but also in establishing a friendly relationship through which it is possible to do much to improve conditions of all of the families reached.

Banquet Plans Nearly Finished

Mrs. LeRoux Working on All States Affair Here Friday Night.

Mrs. Stella LeRoux, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the All-States Banquet being given by the Business and Professional Women's Club Friday night at the Mayflower Hotel, is working to make the occasion one which will be a memorable part of the convention trip for the delegates stopping here on their way to Atlantic City for the biennial meeting of the National Federation.

Miss Charl Williams, president of the National Federation, leaves today for Atlantic City to complete preparations for the convention, which opens there Sunday night. The board will meet there Friday night and the executive committee of the federation Saturday morning preceding the opening of the general sessions. The reception Sunday night will be the first function of the convention week.

The banquet here is expected to be attended by a large number of Washingtonians—members of the local club and their guests—as well as visitors from other States. Miss Helen Latimer, instructor of the Girl Guards of the Y. W. C. A., will lead community singing at the dinner, Mrs. LaRoux has announced, and Miss Kathryn Latimer will accompany at the piano. Miss Virginia Sellers will be soprano soloist.

FTC Verifies Wilson Vision, President Says

Monopoly Danger Still Exists, He Declares at Cornerstone Rites.

The danger growing out of monopoly and unfair methods of competition still exists in America and makes work of the Federal Trade Commission of vital importance, President Roosevelt said yesterday afternoon at cornerstone exercises at the new home of the commission, in the apex of the Federal Triangle.

In the contribution which "the commission has made to our economic life," the President said, "the vision of Woodrow Wilson has been vindicated again.

"When that far-seeing statesman asked the Congress to create the Federal Trade Commission he saw in the realm of trade and commerce a field in which prevention was indeed better than punishment. . . .

"Undoubtedly, in large measure improvement in business ethics has been helped by the constant play of the light of publicity, growing out of the administration of acts such as the Federal Trade Commission act."

"Homes" for All Agencies.

Surrounded by Cabinet officers, members of Congress, and other Government officials, he declared he looked forward to the day when all Government agencies will be housed in homes of their own.

"May this permanent home of the Federal Trade Commission stand for all time as a symbol of the purpose of the Government to insist on a greater application of the golden rule to the conduct o corporations and business enterprises in their relation to the body politic," he said.

Loud speakers carried President Roosevelt's address over a wide area and sidewalks were packed for several blocks. The talk was broadcast nationally.

W. A. Ayres Presides.

W. A. Ayres, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, presided. The invocation was by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, and the benediction by the Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, chaplain of the Senate.

The ceremonies started stone work on the structure, which is being financed by a $3,665,000 PWA allotment and will be finished January 1.

Its erection completes the architectural unit of the $75,000,000 Federal Triangle facing on Constitution avenue.

3 Mexican Convicts Slain In Attempt to Bolt Prison

Mexico City, July 12 (AP)—Three convicts were killed and nine wounded today in a gun battle with Federal troops inside the local penitentiary.

Officials said that prisoners attempting to escape overpowered their guards and rushed to the arms hall, where they seized shotguns and pistols. Soldiers and guards gave battle and the convicts surrendered after fighting for an hour.

Dentist Says Emotion Causes Tooth Decay

Atlantic City, N. J., July 12 (AP). Nagging, worry and the strain of modern living may cause teeth to decay, Dr. I. L. McGonigle, of Freehold, N. J., told the American Dental Society today.

High emotions seem to upset the thyroid gland, he said, and consequently the teeth sometimes don't get the calcium needed to maintain their strength against invasion of bacteria.

Text of President's Speech

Chairman Ayres, Members of the Federal Trade Commission, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Most of the great Federal commissions were set up on the belief that "an ounce of prevention was worth a pound of cure." The Federal Trade Commission was no exception to that sound legislative intent. Prevention of unfair business practices is generally better than punishment administered after the fact of infringements, costly to the consuming public and to honest competitors.

Great and incalculable impacts have shaken the economic world in the period since the commission began its work. The most disastrous depression in the history of business has given new and forcible emphasis to the need for just the contribution which the commission has made to our economic life.

All of the fine things achieved in the interest of fair trade practices since the approval by President Wilson in September, 1914, of the original Federal Trade Commission act justify the event for which we are assembled here today—the laying of the cornerstone of a new home for the commission. The record of accomplishments in the interest of fair competition, in prosperous times and when evil days were upon the land, warrants that this body shall have a habitation adequate to its needs and in keeping with the importance of the tasks which it has accomplished and will continue to perform in the protection of American trade.

The vision of Woodrow Wilson has been vindicated again. When that far-seeing statesman asked the Congress in January, 1914, to create the Federal Trade Commission he saw in the realm of trade and commerce a field in which prevention was indeed better than punishment.

To the Federal Trade Commission, therefore, was given the task of protecting competitive business from further inroads by monopoly and of assuring to the public the fullest possible measure of benefit growing out of the competitive system. When the commission discovered practices which were unfair or which tended toward monopoly, it was to deal with them by injunction rather than by punishment, punishment being reserved for the violator of the injunction.

Undoubtedly, in large measure improvement in business ethics has been helped by the constant play of the light of publicity, growing out of the administration of acts such as the Federal Trade Commission act.

But the dangers to the country growing out of monopoly and out of unfair methods of competition still exist and still call for action. They make the work of the Federal Trade Commission of vital importance in our economic life. We must not be lulled by any sense of false security. Eternal vigilance is the price of opportunity for honest business. It is the price we must pay if business is to be allowed to remain honest and to carry on under fair competitive conditions, protected from the sharp or shady practices of the unscrupulous.

The erection of this splendid home for the Federal Trade Commission completes the architectural unit facing on Constitution avenue.

Furthermore it carries forward the plan to housing eventually in Government owned buildings all of the departments and agencies of the Federal Government in the District of Columbia. During the greater part of its existence the Federal Trade Commission has been housed in temporary lath and plaster construction of the World War years. Many other departments and agencies have been and are housed in rented buildings. The War Department, for example, is scattered over 18 locations, for most of which the Government pays a large annual rental. Dictates of economy and good business sense call for a continuation of the erection of Federal buildings in order, over a comparatively short period of years, to save the taxpayers' money.

Bob Burns Says:

One of those wealthy families was tourin' down the road back home and they saw Grandpaw Snazzy sittin' out on the edge of the road with all of his furniture stacked around him. Their hearts seemed to melt and they stopped and asked Grandpaw Snazzy how long he had lived there. Grandpaw Snazzy says, "Close on to 40 years." The rich man says, "Well, that's a shame—after it's got to be home for you."

He says, "Here's $50—maybe that'll help you." Grandpaw says, "Well, thanks for the 50 but what's it for?" and the man says, "Well, ain't you being evicted?" Grandpaw says, "No." The man says, "Well, what's the furniture doing set out on the road?" Grandpaw says, "Oh, it's just the old lady whitewashing."

'Thank You'

From President Stengle to President Roosevelt:

"Permit me to extend to you on behalf of the members of the American Federation of Government Employes our sincere gratitude and appreciation of the stand you have taken that proposed budget savings are not to be made at the cost of salary cuts, furloughs and dismissals.

"This splendid humanitarian attitude is not only indicative of your sympathy with the working men and women of this country but reveals sound economic and social insight. We congratulate you and thank you.

"This federation favors the most economic and efficient operation of the Government service, and because we believe that economy and efficiency depend largely on the morale of employes, we have long contended that savings can be made in many other ways than by reducing personnel or cutting pay, which have been proved by experience to be destructive to morale.

"We rejoice that you feel, as we do, that substantial savings can be made otherwise than at the expense of the employes."

School Board Shift Opposed By Mrs. Doyle

Hazen Urges Shake-up to Boost Efficiency, Cut 'Red Tape.'

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education declared herself opposed to Commissioner Melvin Hazen's suggestion that board members be appointed by the Commissioners instead of by the District Court.

"I have the feeling that the people of Washington want the Board of Education free from any type of political control," she said. "The present system of appointments by the District Court guarantees the type of public control that the citizenry has a right to expect."

David Babp, secretary of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said he always had advocated the popular election of Board of Education members.

Hazen's recommendations wer included in an agenda submitted to the Commissioners' committee on municipal reorganization. A final report from the committee, headed by E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, is expected within two weeks.

Designed to increase the efficiency of city operation and reduce "red tape" to a minimum, Hazen's recommendatoins were:

Consolidatoin of the Metropolitan and United States Park Police forces.

Appointment and control of the Board of Education and recorder of deeds by the Commissioners.

A definite determination of control and maintenance of streets with a division of costs between the Federal and District governments.

A "centralization" of authority in construction and maintenance of park roadways and drainage systems.

Consolidation of the city's various recreational activities.

A division of costs between the District and Federal governments for operation of the Zoo, Police Court, District Court and the local United States Court of Appeals.

Scrambled jurisdictions of Washington's two major police departments have brought repeated pleas for consolidation. The Washington Criminal Justice Association, in its recent report, urged the two units be combined to eliminate "overlapping functions" and confusion. Hazen previously had voiced approval of this change.

In placing the water system on a public utility basis, Hazen seeks to establish this bureau as though it were privately owned by computing a "fair value" and allowing a reasonable rate of return after providing for retirements and replacements.

Hazen said the District budget should be handled by an office "separate and apart" from the Federal Government and District auditor.

500 Disabled Veterans Cool Off on Potomac Cruise To Quantico as Guests of American Legion, Auxiliary

Patients from Walter Reed Hospital swing crutches out of a bus to find places with 500 war veterans who yesterday traded sickroom for sunlight and cool breezes on the Potomac.

Cool breezes sweeping across the Potomac River yesterday were given a hearty welcome by 500 former service men recruited from the city's hospitals for the annual excursion sponsored by the American Legion and its auxiliaries.

The veterans, accompanied by about 200 nurses and members of the legion, the auxiliary, the Sons of the American Legion and Sons of Disabled Veterans of the World War, sailed to Quantico and back on the S. S. Potomac.

The cruise lasted about four hours and probably would have continued into the evening had Capt. Philip Barber submitted the matter to popular vote.

Cakes, sandwiches and punch were served by the auxiliary, and beer was served at the Potomac's bar.

Members of the party ranged from 90-year-old Civil War veterans to a few 20-year-old CCC youths sent from Walter Reed. Men selected for the trip were crutch cases and others who usually cannot leave the hospital grounds for recreation.

One CCC youth, both feet in casts, was carried over the gangplank by Red Cross volunteers who had charge of transportation to the dock.

In the group were 100 Walter Reed patients, 18 from Soldiers' Home, 236 from St. Elizabeth's Hospital, 30 from the Naval Hospital and 65 from Mount Alto. Doctors and other attendants were present from each hospital.

Fifteen Red Cross drivers from the District Chapter Motor Corps, of which Mrs. L. E. Harris is acting captain, drove the men to and from the boat. The two chapter ambulances, as well as a bus loaned by the Rotary Club, were used.

The volunteer chauffeurs included Miss Elizabeth Adams, Mrs. W. D. Harris, Mrs. J. C. Haskell, Mrs. Z. S. Hendricks, Mrs. O. J. Jordan, Mrs. William H. Luckett, Mrs. Blanche Mackenzie, Mrs. Edward H. McCrahon, Mrs. John W. Norwood, Mrs. A. G. Sanford, Miss Audrey Sigmund, Mrs. W. W. Wheeler, Mrs. S. J. Brodbent and Mrs. H. R. Krinbill.

Members of the Red Cross organizations within the hospitals who co-operated include Mrs. Mabel D. Shakleford, recreation worker at Walter Reed; Miss Margaret Hagan, director; Miss Ruth Anderson, assistant director; Harry Thompson, athletic director; Mrs. Frances Myers, hostess, and Mrs. Evelyn Hursh, recreational worker, all of St. Elizabeth's; Mrs. M. B. Glasscock, Naval Hospital.

Music was provided by a WPA orchestra and the Sons of the American Legion Drum Corps.

Kennedy Acts To Get Loan For District

Resolution Asks Emergency Aid to Forestall Fiscal Crisis.

King Suggests Way to Speed Measure for Funds.

Seeking to forestall a fiscal crisis in the District government, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday introduced in the House a joint resolution enabling the District to obtain emergency loans from the Federal Treasury.

Kennedy decided to offer the resolution after another conference with Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee. King advised him that Senate leaders had told him there is little chance that the omnibus tax measure can be called up in the immediate future.

Senator King believes, however, that the joint resolution, if adopted by the House, may be brought up in the Senate and passed under unanimous consent without having to be referred to the Senate District Committee.

He said that if the precarious condition that faces the District can be explained to the Senate that he believed no Senator would object to its consideration and passage.

Kennedy said he will ask the House District Committee to report the resolution at its regular meeting tomorrow and that he thereafter will ask permission of House leaders to call it up in the House under unanimous consent.

No opposition is anticipated in the committee, as similar legsilation was included in the tax bill reported to the House, but some trouble may be encountered in the House.

District Commissioners have warned Congress that unless some relief is accorded the city by August 1 that municipal obligations may not be met and employes may go unpaid.

Anacostia Set For Community Festival Today

Baby Parade, Sports Events Feature of Gala All-Day Program.

Thousands of residents of Southeast Washington today will cheer as they attend the intercommunity festival at Anacostia, at which the new swimming pool will be officially dedicated, with Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, as the principal speaker.

Contests and events typical of a large fair in a thriving community will feature for the day.

The athletic program will begin at 10 a. m. and continue throughout the afternoon. There will be relay races and novelty events, such as the potatoe race, the three-legged race, the shoe race and the wheel barrow race. There also will be a turkey fight.

A basket luncheon in Anacostia Park will be followed by a baby parade, in which tiny Mr. and Mrs. Anacostia will "do their stuff." Washington newspaper women will announce the winners of the baby contest at 4 p. m.

A soft ball game will follow, and then dinner, and at 7 p. m. there will be a parade down the streets of Anacostia. A pageant and vaudeville show will conclude the program.

'Tarzan' Arrested For Stalking Cat In Feline Fashion

Police, informed by a broadcast a man was on "all fours looking for a cat," found Worthington, they said, in a neighbor's back yard.

They said he looked at them and said something about being "Tarzan, the Ape Man," in quest of a cat with one eye and one ear.

Patrolmen John F. Elman and V. Brazel, who arrested Worthington on a charge of drunkenness, recalled he had been arrested only last Saturday night after he had climbed a tree in quest, they said, of a bear.

S. E. Business Men Hit Delay in Bridge

Disappointment at Congress' failure to appropriate funds for the construction of a new Pennsylvania avenue bridge was expressed last night by the Southeast Business Men's Association.

Blaming the recent traffic death at Fifth and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, on a lack of traffic lights, the association asked that several signals be placed along that section of Pennsylvania avenue. The association also requested that some means be found to establish a community recreation center in Southeast Washington.

Md. Woman Found Shot, Dress Afire, Gas in Room

Baltimore, July 12 (AP).—Louis Knight found the body of his mother, Mrs. Emma Saville, 45, lying on the floor of her kitchen with three bullet wounds in her chest, her dress on fire and gas flowing from the open jets of the stove.

Mrs. Jeannette Parks, the dead woman's daughter, said her mother had complained of the heat.

Police said the shots which entered the woman's body were fired so close the flash of the gun had set fire to her clothing.

Zone Change Foes Wait for Hearing—In Wrong Building

Because of a confusion in terms, some 30 residents of Sligo Park Hills perspired for more than an hour last night in the tiny county commissioners' office in the Liquor Dispensary Building, also called the New County Building, at Silver Spring. They were waiting for the commissioner to appear to conduct a zoning hearing.

Meanwhile, the commissioners waited across the street in the County Building proper for the citizens to present their views on the proposed erection of apartment houses and stores at the entrance to Sligo Park Hills.

After the two groups finally got together, the county officials listened to J. Ingram Medley, one of the petitioners, argue for the zoning change. An argument against the change was presented by Horace J. Donnelly, jr., representing residents in the section. The commissioners said their decision would be announced later.

Three Md. Children Run Away; Fear of Orphanage Blamed

Three barefooted children, ranging in age from 8 to 13, have been missing from their home in nearby Suitland, Md., since 2 p. m. Saturday.

The children, Eleanor, 13; Evart, jr., 10, and Richard, 8, were reported as missing to the police when their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Evart Hoar, Suitland, Md., returned from a shopping tour and found them gone.

The Hoars, who came to Washington three years ago from Ohio, had considered placing the children in a home, and it is believed the three overheard their parents discussing this with a social worker and decided to run away.

Hoar, an employe at the navy yard, has no relatives here, or friends to whom the children may have gone, he said.

Striking Cleaners Ask NLRB Action

The National Labor Relations Board was yesterday petitioned to order an election to determine collective bargaining rights of striking employes in 13 dry-cleaning plants here.

The striking employes, members of the Laundry Workers, Dyers and Cleaners Union, Local 187, filed formal charges before the board, assailing the operators for discrimination because of union activity, refusal to bargain collectively, intimidation of workers, attempts to deal individually with employes and transportation of strike breakers across State lines.

Meanwhile, the union commenced to deal with a cleaning plant in Baltimore in an effort to have it handle the work of several hundred sympathetic independent tailors here.

4 Washingtonians Saved After Hours Adrift In Disabled Boat in Chesapeake Bay Storm

Tossed about in a small disabled sailboat during a storm on Chesapeake Bay and reported lost for almost 12 hours, four Washingtonians were safe last night after Coast Guardsmen and planes from the naval base at Annapolis had failed to locate them.

Novices at sailing, Ravalle Jones, District fireman, who lives at 4514 Fifth street northwest, his wife, Lorraine Jones, Joseph Murray, of 5127 Third street northwest, and his fiance, Lydwin Upperman, of 628 Farragut street northwest, rented a small boat at Shady Side, Md., where the Joneses have a summer cottage, and set out Sunday at 6 p. m. for a pleasure cruise.

Less than an hour after leaving they were caught in a severe wind and rain storm that broke the rudder and main boom of the small craft. Tossed about for eight hours they were forced to drift with the wind and bail out water as the seas washed over the side. The boat was not equipped with oars or life-preservers, they said, and neither of the women could swim.

Telling of her experience last night, Mrs. Jones said:

"It was a terrible experience. Once we drifted almost within reach of land and a sudden gust of wind blew us out toward the Middle of the bay. We were without food or water for hours and took turns at calling out for help—the boat was thrown about by the waves like a toothpick and I was certain we would never get back alive."

Almost 10 hours after they had left the four finally were washed ashore on the Eastern Shore at McDaniels, Md., near Clayborne. Not wishing to disturb the residents of the house near which they landed at 3:30 a. m., the shivering survivors waited until daybreak to ask a Mr. Rice, owner of a large bakery here, for assistance. With the help of Rice the party was able to get word of their rescue to Washington and were towed back to Shady Side.

Navy planes, not being informed of their safety, landed near the party on the return trip and offered assistance.

Mrs. Jones and Miss Upperman were suffering from exposure and slight cuts inflicted by the swinging boom of the sail, while Jones and Murray nursed throats made sore from shouts for help.

Murray, an employ of the Bureau of Lighthouses of the Commerce Department, said:

"We saw several lighthouses, but with a broken rudder and no oars we were unable to reach them."

Ginger Rogers Reports a Few Ancient Events

By Ginger Rogers.

Hollywood, July 12 (U.P.).—It has just occurred to me that if the present day columnist had been covering the news in ancient days, history courses might be a sheer joy, instead of a lot of dry narrative.

Imagine reading a bit of lowdown on Columbus' big marine enterprise if it had been recorded in the manner used by one of the more voluble chatter writers—something like this: "." . . . The gosspis have it that this new real-estate-and-excursion promoter, Columbus, has won himself a happy home and pu-lenty of drag in a certain royal household . . . and is a well known Spanish King burned up? . . . Henry, the seventh of England's blue-blood hanks, thumbsdowned the gabby Genoa's cross-ocean project when the chance to finance it was offered him . . . Barcelona bookies are offering 5 to 3 that Chris winds up behind the eight ball, when and if he makes the Atlantic hop—no takers . . . ."

Or take the matter of Cleopatra's career, for instance. A columnist would have gone into rhapsodies about that . . . I'll bet that Caius Sardonicus or one of his assistants on the editorial staff of the Roman-Star-Bulletin would have ground out something like this for the morning editions:

Lowdown on Cleo.

". . . Those in the know say that the ghost of Julius (man of the hour) Ceasar is doing a tango in his red granite tomb—all on account of this Cleopatra gal's carryings on with Marc (he-man conqueror) Anthony . . . And such carryings-ons! He was her man but she done him wrong! . . . And was a popular Egyptian politician glad that he didn't show for the house-warming brawl at the Cleo-Marc shack the other orgy time . . . Arsenic in the soup, you dopes! . . .

"The burning of Rome would have made swell material for the columnist, too. This way, maybe . . .

". . . Newest pain-in-the-neck from last week's big palace-and-cottage bonfire is that the insurance companies aren't going to pay off . . . The underwriter mob claims that the entire city technically is government property . . . And because the fireworks were started by Nero (Emperor Fiddler), no dough for the burn out . . . Petitions put into circulation by William Augustus (Bill) Trojan, Third avenue ward-heeler seeking the boot for Nero . . . Bib shot nonchalant in the palace backyard brushing up on his violin technique . . . Boys around the bath houses have it that he plans a scram for Greece if the mob looks like it will use spears for anything more serious than cleaning finger nails . . ."

And the Circus Maximus.

"Opening to a capacity crowd at the coliseum last night, 'The Assassins of 43' proved superb entertainment, with the performance of the star, Creco Valerian, being particularly outstanding. Second-night patrons, however, will miss his masterful demonstrations of broadsword technique, as he was killed in an encore combat with four freshmen from the Gladiatorial College. His understudy, the Tyrol Terror, will carry on in the principal role as long as he survives. The coliseum management promises a new supply of lions and martyrs for next week's performance."

I have just read this column over and I realize I had better stick to the screen. I thank you!

Huge Net Prepared To Trap 'Monster'

Newport, Ark., July 12 (AP).—Manufacture of a huge rope net to be used in an attempt to snare Newport's mysterious White River "Monster" went forward here today under direction of W. E Penix, State toll bridge collector.

Penix and friends rounded up all available rope and said it probably would take ten days to complete the net. It will be 40 feet long, 15 feet wide and have a mesh or 6 or 8 inches.

The "monster," lurking in a mile-long, 60-foot deep eddy of the river, was described by half a dozen persons who claim to have seen it as being of enormous size—"as long as three automobiles."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

"Saratoga," Co-starring Clark Gable, to Be Shown at Capitol in Near Future; "Mountain Music" Opens at Met. Tomorrow; Mary Astor's Busy Week; Audition Blanks for "Going Native" Now Ready.

FOR years there has been an undercurrent of resentment among a certain segment of picturegoers against the posthumous release of popular stars' starring vehicles completed after their deaths. This prejudice seems gradually to be disappearing from the minds of those who habitually patronize the films.

BELL.

The Will Rogers pictures, for example, released after the fatal crash of Wiley Post's plane in Alaska, grossed phenomenal returns at the boxoffices of the entire world. The same bids fair to be the case with the last picture in which Jean Harlow ever appeared.

It is disclosed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that the decision to release "Saratoga"—it was first the company's intention to write this subject off the books as a total loss—was reached only after an overwhelming public demand had expressed itself in all parts of the country. New York newspapers recently conducted a poll on the matter and the result was practically 100 per cent in favor of the picture's being shown. In the Washington territory, it is reported by Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., an M-G-M affiliate, that every city and town under his jurisdiction has manifested a similar eagerness to view the picture in which Miss Harlow is costarred with Clark Gable, with Lionel Barrymore and Frank Morgan leading the support.

"Saratoga" was virtually completed, save for a few final "shots," when Miss Harlow was forced to stop work and surrender to what proved to be an untimely and fatal illness—untimely, not that it suspended work on the film, but because it ended so prematurely one of the most brilliant careers the cinema had developed.

Fortunately, from the viewpoint of production, an obscure young actress by the name of Mary Dees, who bears a striking resemblance to Jean Harlow in features, figure and coloring, was secured to complete the few remaining scenes in which Jean was to have appeared. By clever posing and adept camera manipulation, the picture was finished so successfully that it is said a casual spectator will find it impossible to discover the substitution of Miss Dees in the leading feminine role at the end.

"Saratoga" was written by Anita Loos and Robert Hopkins, who authored "San Francisco," and in view of the conditions outlined, and a growing public clamor to see the last picture in which Jean Harlow ever will be seen—barring revivals and reissues of her earlier releases—soon will be shown at one of the Loew houses in Washington, probably Loew's Capitol.

Having known Jean as well as I did, I am one who is not sure he wants to see it.

Speaking of "Mountain Music," as we seem to have been in the caption of the Martha Raye blackface study appearing on this page, that boisterous comedy, costarring Miss Raye and the droll Bob Burns, will play a repeat downtown engagement on the screen of the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. "The League of Frightened Men," with Walter Connolly, Lionel Stander and Eduardo Ciannelli, will conclude its F street engagement with the final showing of the Nero Wolfe tale tonight.

Mary Astor, who probably no longer jots down notes in a little book, spent the busiest week-end of her career last week.

Currently at the peak of her featured role in Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Hurricane" for the screen, Miss Astor on last Thursday, Friday and Saturday commuted by motor car between Hollywood and Santa Barbara to appear in the latter city in an important role in a stage production of Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30." This entailed driving her own car to Santa Barbara each one of the three days immediately following the completion of her day's work in the studio. After the fall of the final curtain on the Coward cycle of short plays, Miss Astor drove back to Los Angeles, snatched a few hours sleep and reported for studio work, made up and ready to go, at 9 a. m.

This Santa Barbara engagement marked Miss Astor's first appearance in the living theater in seven years. In the only other stage engagement of her life, she appeared with Edward Everett Horton in a piece called "Among the Married"—which seems to have been just a shade on the side of the prophetic!

The object of the present excursion into the traditional theater was for the purpose of paving the way for a possible later stage appearance on Broadway, an ambition Miss Astor is said to have harbored for several years. I wish her luck—after all that effort, she deserves it.

As discussion progresses on the matter of Katharine Cornell's projected world tour in a repertoire of her plays, it develops that the "first lady of the American theater" has appeared only once outside of the United States and Canada—in other words, off the North American continent. That was when she acted Jo in "Little Women" in England, her first success on the stage.

However, she has played roles of many nationalities and has been seen in dramas with their locales in many other countries. So, if she makes her contemplated world tour next year, she will have the opportunity to see these lands which were represented in her stage productions: Hawaii, "The Man Who Came Back." Japan, "Bushido" (her first stage appearance); "The Ivory Fan" (her next production). China, "The Empress" and "The Man Who Came Back." Singapore, "The Letter." Celebes, "The Wingless Victory." Austria, "Alien Corn." France, "Saint Joan." Scotland, "Dishonored Lady." England, "A Bill of Divorcement," "Will Shakespeare," "The Enchanted Cottage," "Candida," "The Outsider," "The Way Things Happen," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "The Green Hat" and "Flowers of the Forest."

Miss Cornell has been, at least, a vicarious traveler.

Application blanks for those desiring auditions for the fifth edition of the "Going Native" revue, to be staged by Gene Ford at Loew's Capitol next month, are now available. They may be secured in the lobby of the Capitol, or from the drama desks of the five local papers. Time and place of the auditions will be made known later this week.

Personal Preference Note.

If I were to apply for a "going native" permit, I would be inclined, at the moment, to make it either for the Arctic Circle or Little America!

Comedienne Does a "Lulu Belle"

THE CALIFORNIA COURTS are proceeding with caution before decreeing that Frank Wallace has been and still is the legal husband of Mae West and therefore entitled to half her property. 'Zenda' Given Worthy Revival By Roadsiders

By Nelson B. Bell.

That swashbuckling, but still interesting and effective, romantic drama, "The Prisoner of Zenda," was efficiently revived by the Roadside Theater last night to inaugurate a fortnight's run in the "old red barn."

It was this play which three decades and more ago placed the late James K. Hackett among the forefront of the American theater's "matinee idols." Despite this comparative antiquity, "Zenda" is in all essentials a modern play, not dated beyond the fact that a program note states that the action takes place in the mythical Kingdom of Ruritania in the year 1894.

It is written in the modern manner—save for an occasional utilization of the "aside," which Eugene O'Neill only has had the courage to restore to favor in recent years—and is played "straight," with seriousness and intelligence, by the Roadside cast that has been assembled for its interpretation.

Requires Long Cast.

The cast is a long one, necessarily, since the development of the plot involves two opposing factions in Ruritania, each striving, through villainy or high pursuit of virtue and honor, to gain the throne of the little country of Anthony Hope's imagination. The story of Rudolph Rassendyll, the adventurous young Englishman, who masquerades as Rudolph V, the red Elphberg, to save his crown from the head of the plotting Black Duke Michael, and in so doing wins the love of the rightful king's betrothed, the Princess Flavia, needs no recapitulation at this late date. It is still a colorful and picturesque piece of writing that outlines a heroic bit of romanticism with clarity and dramatic soundness.

Last night's players did themselves proud in their accelerated portrayal of the many roles in the play. Richard Kreuzberg, in the dual role of the two Rudolphs, differentiated the characters of the drunken monarch and the daring young Britisher strongly and played both parts well—a fine achievement, considering the heavy burden the two roles place upon a single actor. His staunch henchmen, Col. Sapt and Fritz von Tarlenheim, were impersonated with scarcely less skill by J. Edmund Veitch and Ralph Fowler. Michael, the Black Elphberg, afforded Lawrence Beckerman an opportunity to personify all of the villainies in the catalogue, from tricking innocent young women to a complete willingness to commit murder—multiple murders, if necessary.

Emotionalism and Comedy.

Virginia True made an appealing and romantic figure of the Princess Flavia, but perhaps the best work of the evening, on the distaff side, was that of Betty Gray in the exacting role of Antoinette de Mauban, the longest feminine part in the play. Miss Gray displayed emotional power and a nice ability to maintain an engaging French accent.

A splendid touch of comedy was contributed to the play by Jerry Hess in the role of the Mayor of Streslau, and another by Ralph Patton, as Bertram Bertrand, a young English artist and friend of Rassendyll, who was adroitly talked out of his recognition of the masquerader. The settings and costumes are in the period and the spirit of the play.

If blunders were made at the Roadside last night, they were made by those out front, rather than by those behind the footlights. The audience mistakenly insisted on cheering the hero and hissing and booing the villain at every opportunity—a habit bred of a long list of old-time melodramas that ought to be held in control when the occasion demands, as it did last night.

Blackfriars Guild Will Present Play At Sylvan Tonight

The Blackfriars Guild's production of "Smilin' Thru" will be given tonight at the Sylvan Theater at the Monument, under joint auspices of the Community Center Department and the office of National Capital Parks.

It will be preceded by a concert by the Washington Gaslight Co. Employes Band at 8 o'clock and will be the fourth of 12 summer festivals at the Monument.

In case of rain, the performance will be given tomorrow night.

Two additional festivals will be given this month. On July 20 the Navy Band and the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group will present "An Opera Rehearsal" and Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury." On July 27, Theodore Bekefi and his dancers will be seen in a program featuring ballet, acrobatic and character dances.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, July 12.—Feeling facetious this morning, so I sharpened a pencil and tried to prove all Hollywoodites are related—by romance. Really, we're just one big family. For example, take Gloria Swanson as a starting point. First she married Wallace Beery, now the mate of Rita Gilman; next she married Herb Somborn, who later wed a nonprofessional; then she married and divorced Henri de la Palaise, the present consort of Constance Bennett, whose first husband was Chester Moorehead and whose second mate was Philip Plant, the present husband of a society girl.

GLORIA SWANSON.

Connie is the daughter of Adrienne Morrison—now Mrs. Eric Pinker—and the Richard Bennett whose second divorce made headlines, and the sister of both Barbara Bennett who married Morton Downey and Joan Bennett, who after divorcing John Fox, was engaged to John Considine, the present husband of Carmen Pantages, but later was married and divorced from Gene Markey, the one-time fiance of Gloria Swanson, whose fourth husband, Michael Farmer, had previously been engaged to the late Marilyn Miller, the former wife of the late Jack Pickford (who was once wed to the late Olive Thomas) whose sister, Mary, divorced Owen Moore, who later married Katherine Perry, in order to wed Douglas Fairbanks, the present husband of Lady Ashley and the former mate of Beth Sully (now Mrs. Jack Whiting) whose son, Douglas, jr., once married to Joan Crawford, the present Mrs. Franchot Tone, is now reported to be romancing with Marlene Dietrich, who formerly romanced with Joseph von Sternberg.

I haven't worked out the remoter connection yet, but you get the idea. Seems to me Hollywood invitations ought to include the kiddies—they might like to see their papas.

Met Bing Crosby's pa and resolved to satisfy an ancient curiosity, so I asked him how his dulcet-voiced offspring managed to acquire that nickname. Henry Lillis Crosby, I learned, was a holy terror as a child and among other sanguinary yens, he had a passion for Indian fighting. Armed with an imaginary gun, astride of an imaginary horse, he galloped about the Crosby manor, shrieking "Bing, Bing!" as he potshot imaginary redskins. His battle cry suggested the nickname—and it stuck.

The largest arsenal in Hollywood belongs, not to the United States Army, but to an elderly collector named J. S. Stenbridge, who rents his "toys of passion" to the studios and earns more money therefrom than many a star. He can supply anything in the firearm line from sixteenth century matchlocks to modern guns and small cannons. He has 5,000 military rifles in stock and so many pistols and revolvers that he has lost all count. As a profitable sideline he manufactures ammunition for movie scenes. For night use, his blanks are filled with flash powder. If you're a gun lover, be sure to visit the Stenbridge arsenal when you make that trip to Hollywood.

I had lunch with Jack Oakie today and found him a bit doleful. He has a complaint to make about you fans and asked me to pass it along.

"Look," he mourned, "I've been checking up on my mail. During the last month I've had requests for my old suits, my discarded neckties, my autograph on cigarette wrappers. People want me to send them clips of matches from the Brown Derby and the Troc—they ask for autographed menus from the studio cafe, for cuttings from movies, for stills. But not one has had the kindness to ask for discarded razor blades, and I've got thousands!"

Austro-Nazi Pact To Rule Press Made

Vienna, July 12 (AP).—An Austro-German commission reached an agreement to control the press in both countries "in the interest of the German race" and to end their frequent newspaper attacks on each other, it was announced officially tonight.

The commission also decided Austria and Germany will respect the political and cultural philosophies of each other, the statement said.

'Phoney' Names Attacked.

Boston, July 12 (AP).—A one-man campaign against "sugar-coated" names for stage and screen stars got under way in staid Boston tonight, when State Representative Francis X. Coyne proposed a law against "phoney" ones which "deceive the public."

Safe, Minus $400, Found in Garage

An empty safe, reported stolen from a cafe at 1212 U street northwest and ransacked of $400, was found in the garage of Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, yesterday morning. The safe was found by the colored Congressman when he returned to his home at 1320 R street after a trip.

Police reported the safe had been stolen from the cafe of Reginald Martin on U street Sunday night. It had been smashed open with a hatchet and furnace shaker.

Legislators to Debate Court Plan Over Radio

Arguments for and against the compromise plan to increase the membership of the Supreme Court will be broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System at 7 p. m. Thursday (E. S. T.) in a debate between Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, and Representative Samuel B. Pettingill (Democrat), of Indiana.

Logan is co-author with Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, of the compromise court plan now hotly debated in the Senate. Pettingill has definitely committed himself in opposition to any change in the existing setup of the Supreme Court.

The woman was quoted by Carroll as saying she sought to collect Kappen's insurance money. Angelo Ralph Giancola, 21, and his brother John, 20, are being held at Belleville, Ill.

GIANTS MAKE TRIPLE PLAY, BUT LOSE TO PHILS, 6-3

The Washington Post Sports

* X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JULY 13, 1937 17

This Morning

DiMaggio Can Hit, But He Has No Color.

By Shirley Povich.

Joe DiMaggio, with his free swing and solid stance, may conceivably displace Babe Ruth as the all-time home run champion of the big leagues, but Giuseppe will never make the turnstiles click as merrily as did the Babe.

Because DiMaggio is news only when he hits a home run. Modesty may be a virtue in other walks of life, but in the big leagues they pay off on braggadocio, color and showmanship. In that league DiMaggio couldn't hit .029.

POVICH.

The Yankees' young Italian boy is seemingly too goldarned content to hit his home runs and those long triples and let it go at that. He has none of Ruth's flourish and gusto, none of Dizzy Dean's self-admiration. And because of that, he will set no salary records no matter how many slugging records fall before the power of his bat.

• • • •

Down here last week at the all-star game Giuseppe scarcely broke into print, despite the fact that he was leading both leagues in home run production and was the batting sensation of the season. This reporter abandoned all ideas of an interview when DiMaggio emitted a couple of unintelligible grunts in answer to what we thought were some well-put questions.

• • • •

On the days that he hits a home run or two they can't keep DiMaggio out of the news, but apart from that he is no more noteworthy than another birth in China. And you know, dear reader, that publicity is very vital to outstanding success in baseball.

• • • •

The fellow can smite that apple, of course. And he can cover acres of ground in the outfield, and he has positively the greatest throwing arm in either league, but when he isn't hitting those home runs he has no more fan appeal than a foul tip. He doesn't even crab at the umpires. The even tenor of his ways is killing—killing his chances to really cash in on the big money in baseball.

• • • •

Sure, he's done pretty well so far for a rookie. Made the Yankees come through with $8,000 last season—his first in the majors—and forced 'em to up it to $15,000 this year. But that's far, far from the $80,000 Ruth commanded or the $165,000 he once received for a three-year contract.

• • • •

Whatever salary heights DiMaggio does reach he will achieve with the power in his bat. But even Col. Ruppert admitted that Babe Ruth, owner of the most murderous bat of all time, wasn't being paid for his home runs. The Babe, as you know, was paid off on his magnetism at the gate.

• • • •

Fellows like Ruth and Dizzy Dean, as you know, didn't have to hit a home run or pitch a winning ball game to get their names in the headlines. Dean merely has to praise himself and deride others, but Ruth commanded the headlines in any number of ways.

• • • •

There was the time when the Babe, en route from Southern training, gorged himself on a half-dozen hot dogs and a half-dozen bottles of pop at one sitting and came up with the most celebrated tummy ache in the history of the Nation. The Babe's eating proclivities were well known and the sympathy of a Nation was with him when he was rushed off the tarin to a hospital with doctors issuing hourly bulletins on his condition.

• • • •

He didn't get away with it, but the Babe back in 1922 set himself up as a bigger man than Judge Landis in baseball by openly defying Landis and taking himself off on a barnstorming tour after the World Series of 1922. That cost the Babe a 38-day suspension at the start of 1923 and a $5,000 fine. And it kept his name in the papers.

• • • •

In some ways, he was just a great big kid, with no particular idea that his thorough naturalness was a powerful asset. He didn't stop to think sometimes and one of those times was on a September day at Griffith Stadium in 1927 when the Babe refused to pose with Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee for the Presidency.

Ruth waved away the photographers who went out into rightfield before the game and asked him to pose with Hoover in a box seat. "G'wan away from here," the Babe yelled. "I'm an Al Smith man. I ain't posing with Hoover." The Babe didn't get a home run that day, but he was very much in the news just the same. Those quotes of his were priceless.

• • • •

To date, the extent of DiMaggio's extra-curricular publicity has been his admission that he is saving his money. I would say that isn't calculated to excite the Nation's fans.

Dempsey's Father Held for 'Fighting'

Salt Lake City, July 12 (AP).—Hyrum Dempsey, 80, father of Jack Dempsey, was accused of assault and battery in a complaint signed today by Hannah Lythgoe, 66.

Deputy Sheriff Lee Richardson said Mrs. Lythgoe accused Dempsey of striking her on the nose last night during an argument over Dempsey's step-daughter and a boy friend.

Briton Gets Lead as U.S. Star Falters

Shute's Erratic Driving Is Costly; 36-Hole Finals Today.

By the Associated Press.

Walton Heath, England, July 12.—Henry Cotton, Great Britain's "modern Harry Vardon," beat par by five shots today to take a two-hole lead over Denny Shute, American P. G. A. champion, at the halfway point of their 72-hole match for the world's match play golf championship and $2,500.

Nobody takes the world's championship stuff very seriously, but $2,500 is serious and so were Shute and Cotton.

They reported, together with the rain, at Walton Heath's first tee this morning, solemnly shook hands and never spoke again until they reached the thirty-sixth green, where Denny conjured a 25-footer into the cup and then walked over and shook hands again.

Denny's Driving Lapses.

Down two holes at the eleventh and again at the twenty-third, and never up until the thirty-third, Cotton, newly crowned British open champion, took advantage of one of Denny's inevitable driving lapses to win the thirty-third and thirty-fourth, to gain his 2 up margin at the end of the first 36 holes.

Up until then it had been all Shute. Outdriven from the tee and bothered a little by a slight hook on his long irons, Shute chipped and putted superbly and looked capable of recovering from any mistake until wild drives overtook him near the end.

With 50 London "bobbies" holding back the crowd of 7,000, Cotton, looking as if he were busy hating someone, came home in 34, 4 under par for an afternoon round of 70 and a total for the day of 141. Except for mediocre putting, tall Henry would have been that much under on the other three nines.

Hot Tempered.

Notoriously bad tempered during his early career, Cotton gave way to one tantrum today when he drove into the rough on the twenty-first hole and still was there after two futile whacks at the stubborn heather. When his fourth shot weakly floated to the fringe of the green 15 yards away from the cup, the Briton lifted his blaster and bashed it several times against a fence to relieve his feelings. After that he won two of the next three holes to draw even again.

Shute played steadily throughout until he lost control of his driver. The American was 1 up as late as the thirty-first, but Cotton squared it at the thirty-second by sinking a 13-footer for a birdie. Shute then lost the thirty-third, where his drive sliced into the sand, and the thirty-fourth, where he pushed another drive under a hawthorn bush and had to use a blaster to get out.

They halved the thirty-fifth in birdies and Shute kept his deficit at two holes on the thirty-sixth only by sinking a 25-footer for a half.

The second and last thirty-six holes will be played tomorrow.

Michigan Golfer Gets 18 Birdies, 17 Pars for 127

Jackson, Mich., July 12 (AP).—Melvin (Chick) Harbert, 22-year-old Battle Creek amateur golfer, shot rounds of 63 and 64 today for a 36-hole score of 127 in the Michigan Open golf tournament at Arbor Hills Country Club.

Harbert had 18 birdies, 17 pars and 1 bogey, and was 17 strokes under par. He led the field in the second round of play. Arbor Hills is a 6,701-yard course. Harbert shot his last four holes in the rain.

Harbert's 63 on the morning round was the lowest ever recorded in the Michigan Open and a record for 18 holes at Arbor Hills. Marvin Stahl, defending champion, held the course record previously, with 66.

Curley, Veteran Promoter, Dies Unexpectedly

Victim of Heart Disease; Staged Boxing, Tennis and Wrestling.

New York, July 12 (AP).—Jack Curley, one of the country's leading sports promoters, died suddenly at his Great Neck, Long Island, home today, victim of heart diseases. He was 61, a veteran of 38 years in sports promotion.

Although wrestling was his favorite and most lucrative field, Curley's experience covered a wide range. He promoted the Havana bout in which Jess Willard won the heavyweight boxing championship from Jack Johnson, staged bull fights and flea circuses, and engineered public appearances of Annette Kellerman, Enrico Caruso, William Jennings Bryan, Rudolph Valentino, the Vatican Choir, Georges Carpentier, the French fighter, and William Tilden.

Curley appeared to be in good health yesterday. About midnight became ill, and died at 12:45 a. m. (E. D. T.). An inhalator was used unsuccessfully. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bessie Grobgeld Curley, and two children, Jack and Jean.

Middleweight Champ Fears He'll Overtrain

Hot Weather Bothers Freddie Steele; Sudden Change May Upset Whole Training Procedure; But It's Just Swell for Hobo Williams.

By Bill McCormick.

Trained fine one week ahead of time and facing the grave possibility of going stale before his bout against Hobo Williams at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night, Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele yesterday reduced pressure on his strenuous conditioning grind.

Before a large crowd of members of the Variety Club, promoting the important bout which is sponsored by The Washington Post, Steele indulged in only two desultory rounds in the ring against a cagey featherweight, Bobby Dechter.

The official explanation given for Steele's abbreviated workout was that his Chief Sparmate, Walter Woods, was absent in Philadelphia, where he fought a ten-round main event, and that his other sparmate, Jimmy Williams, had received a cut eye in a previous workout.

All of which was true enough, but not the real explanation why Steele worked only two rounds. Ray Arcel, who is developing a new crop of gray hairs trying to cope with the unseasonable weather, his first training assignment with Champion Freddie and the ultra-ultra cuisine provided at the Griffith Farms training camp where the Tacoma title holder is established, was frank to admit that Steele is on the verge of becoming overtrained.

Freddie Is Ready.

"Freddie is ready to step into the ring tomorrow night," he conceded. "Now our problem is to keep him in that condition for the fight. It will be one of the most difficult tasks I have ever faced. If this hot weather keeps up, we can become accustomed to it and act accordingly. If it turns cool, we must readjust our plans.

"If it turns cool for a few days, then gets hot again, we will be faced by a real problem—a problem that will require every bit of resourcefulness on our part, to shove Freddie into the ring in shape to do battle with a fighter like the Hobo."

Williams in Shape.

Williams, accustomed to Washington weather, appeared in the best shape of his entire career as he went through his paces at the stuffy little gymnasium where he has elected to whip himself into condition.

For one round he loosened up, then walloped the big bag for two rounds and the little bag for the same number of minutes. This was followed by a rub-down and a trip to the scales, which showed he now weighs only 164 pounds. Under the terms of his contract for the big bout, Williams must weigh not more than 163 pounds. His weight yesterday indicates that he will make the limit without any difficulty.

Ticket sales boomed after the week-end. The advance already has passed $3,000—a record for the District—and brisk business at the various points of sale presage one of the greatest gates Washington ever has known.

The main ticket office is located at the National Theater, 1345 E street, and tickets also are on sale at Joe Turner's, Goldie Ahearn's and the leading hotels.

Buck Everett, long a local heavyweight favorite, will box Eddie Hogan, Philadelphia, in an 8-round preliminary to the Freddie Steele-Hobo Williams bout at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night.

Everett has been defeated only three times in Washington in the past four years. At the very outset of legalized boxing here, he dropped a highly-disputed decision to Bob Tow, of Alexandria. Bob Godwin, former light-heavyweight champion, pulled an upset over Buck on one of the police cards and in his last appearance here Everett was flattened by former Light-heavyweight Champion Bob Olin after he had taken the first seven rounds.

Among others, Everett has outpointed Natie Brown (twice), Marty Gallagher and Steve Dudas. He has been active on the Pacific Coast since leaving Washington.

Hogan, who has a remarkable record, is Jack Dempsey's latest heavyweight protege. He has to his credit victories over such as Sandy McDonald, Jack Pettifer, Chester Matan, Larry Johnson and Unknown Winston.

In a semifinal scheduled for ten rounds, Joey Archibald, the No. 1 fistic attraction hereabouts, will take on Harry Gentile, a featherweight from Hartford, Conn., with a good record. Other sixes and a four-round opener will complete the bill.

Cards Rally In 8th, Whip Pirates, 6-5

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 12. — A two-run rally in the eighth inning gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 6-to-5 victory over the Pirates today in the opener of a two-game series.

Arguments between the Gashouse Gang and Umpires Moran and Parker became heated and two Cards, Leo Durocher and Johnny Mize, were sent to the showers.

In all, three Cards left the game, Catcher Ogrodowski retiring in the eighth after he was struck on the hand by a foul tip. Mickey Owen finished behind the plate.

Joe Medwick led the Cardinal attack with three hits, driving in as many runs at the expense of three Pirate hurlers—Jim Weaver, Russ Bauers and Mace Brown.

Bob Weiland started for St. Louis, but was knocked from the mound in the seventh when the Pirates took the lead with a two-run rally. Si Johnson finished and was credited with the victory.

Terry Given Bum's Rush By Umpire

Phils' Rally in Seventh Nets Six Runs and Clinches Game.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 12.—While the Giants furnished much of the excitement today with a first-inning triple play and Manager Bill Terry's ninth-inning ejection, the Phillies combined three hits with an error, four bases on balls and a sacrifice to score six runs in the seventh and whip the New Yorkers, 6 to 3.

All but one of the Phils' runs were put on base by Hal Schumacher, who failed to go nine innings for the seventh consecutive time. The right-hander, once one of the most consistent members of the Giants' staff, has turned in only three complete games this year while winning seven and losing eight.

LaMaster Effective.

Lefty LaMaster, removed for a pinch-hitter in the winners' big inning, allowed only six hits and two runs and received credit for the victory, his eighth.

Orville Jorgens, who replaced him, was pitching in the ninth when Terry was thrown out of the game, the first time that has happened to him in his career. The Giants' pilot objected to a strike called on Mel Ott by Umpire Bill Klem.

Klem ended a long argument by ordering Terry out of the dug-out and into the clubhouse. Ott subsequently doubled and came home with the Giants' final run on an infield out and a long fly.

The Terrymen, who had beaten the Phils six out of their last nine games and were seeking to gain ground on the leading Cubs, turned back their rivals' first threat in the opening inning by executing the first triple play of the National League season.

Arnovich Starts It.

Norris, Martin and John Moore led off with successive hits to fill the bases. Then Arnovich lofted a short fly into right. Ott came tearing in, just managed to snare it, and tossed to Mancuso. Norris, thinking the ball had fallen safe, was over the plate and an easy out. Mancuso then tossed to Bartell, who in turn threw to Chiozza to retire Martin.

The Giants were first to score, in the third, on doubles by Schumacher and Bartell and Joe Moore's single.

Then came the Phils' seventh. Scharein singled to start it, and then followed a walk, a sacrifice, two singles and another walk. That was enough for Schumacher.

Sam Francis Signs Pro Football Contract

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Sam Francis, brilliant fullback with the University of Nebraska eleven last fall, signed a contract today with the Chicago Bears of the National Professional Football League.

Francis, a 215 pounder standing more than 6 feet tall, was practically a unanimous choice for fullback on the 1936 all-American mythical eleven. He joins a team already carrying two famous fullbacks, Bronko Nagurski and Jack Manders, former Minnesota luminaries.

Cincinnati Night Game Is Postponed by Rain

Cincinnati, July 12 (AP).—Rain and wet grounds forced calling off a scheduled flood-light game between the Cincinnati Reds and the National League leading Chicago Cubs tonight.

It was the second night game this year to be postponed because of rain. The other, with Pittsburgh, scheduled June 16, is to be played August 5.

Nats Regain Simmons on West Swing

The big bat of Al Simmons, a frozen asset of the Washington ball club during the past three weeks, will be unsheathed again when the Nats take to the West today.

His own inventiveness has aided Simmons' return to the Nats' line-up following a siege on the bench with a fractured hand suffered when he was hit by one of Oral Hildebrand's pitches in the riot game against the Browns.

When his left hand still pained him in batting workouts this week, Simmons attached to the handle of his bludgeon a small sponge that aids in absorbing the shock of the blow and discovered that he could hit without pain.

Yesterday, at Griffith Stadium, as the rest of the Nats were given a day of rest, Simmons was at home plate for nearly an hour swinging his sponge-handle bat and rapping line drives all over the premises. Several of his swats went into the bleachers and he expressed himself as satisfied with his batting eye.

Anxious for Action.

"This gadget will tide me over until my hand fully heals," said Simmons. "It still hurts a mite, but not much. Anyway, I want to get back in the lineup. It's no fun sitting on the bench. I'll be with 'em when the team leaves for Cleveland tomorrow night."

Simmons' services in the outfield are solely needed by the Nats. Neither Freddie Sington nor Jess Hill, his substitutes, have been able to provide the batting punch that Simmons gives the club—especially the long-distance hits.

The West begins in Cleveland for the Nats. After a four-game series there, the club will move to Detroit for three games, thence to Chicago for four and then to St. Louis for four.

Charles Town Prepares for 4-Day Meet

Ralph McBain, custodian of the jockeys' room, says that Palumbo, Machado and Root will not have everything their own way, as Manny Berg, Al Tryon, Frankie Cusimano, Gene Terhune, Herbie Lauch, Vernon Wisner, Joe Sherry, George McMullen, Frankie Munoz, L. Laurin, O. Hernandez, B. Martinez, Leon Garrett, Joe Sylvester, W. L. Smith, Cecil Coffman, W. Kirk, L. Dubost, Francis Polk, Willie Snyder, Joe Leonard, P. Castanova, J. Hummer and Tommy Fowler have all asked for permission to ride during the approaching racing.

Race Secretary Freddie Burton and Assistant Bill Shelley are busy on an all-star eight race opening day program. They will have in the neighborhood of 400 horses to pick from, therefore they should offer interesting sport regardless of weather or track conditions.

The vest pocket meeting will be conducted under the rules of the West Virginia Racing Commission, T. C. Bradley will serve as the commission's representative steward. Kenneth N. Gilpin, of Virginia, and J. J. Grady, of Lexington, Ky., will be the other stewards.

Practically the same officials that helped make the recent 32-day session such a highly successful one, will be on hand.

Daily race specials will be run by the B. & O. Fans, who plan to motor, will find the roads excellent with free parking space for 5,000 automobiles on track property.

Rough Time Wins Over Clingendaal In Suffolk Stake

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 12.—Hooking up for the "rubber" duel between them, Rough Time, owned by Yancey Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md., defeated A. C. Compton's Clingendaal by four lengths at level weights in the $2,000 added Suffolk Handicap, 6-furlong feature of the opening day of the Suffolk Downs summer meeting.

Both horses carried 126 pounds and Clingendaal, a 6-5 co-favorite with Rough Time, never challenged as the Christmas sprinter went to the top at the start and was never headed.

Third, two and a half lengths behind Clingendaal, was Lady Bewithus, that held show money by the same margin from Sorceress. Rough Time paid $4.60, Clingendaal was worth $2.40 to place and Sorceress brought the same amount to show.

Ten thousand persons saw Rough Time get away flying and lead from flag fall to finish while being clocked in 1:11 over a track which was a shade off, although not enough to be so classified.

It was Rough Time's fourth win in seven starts. Clingendaal had defeated Rough Time in a previous outing at Rockingham Park while being spotted 2 pounds. Previously Rough Time had defeated the Pharamond II gelding while spotting him 10 pounds. The $1,510 winner's end of the purse brought his earnings to $7,584 for the year.

Connecticut Field Topped By Mrs. Vare

Eastern Point, Conn., July 12 (AP). Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, got away to a good start today in quest of her eighth Griswold Cup triumph in the annual Smenecossett invitation golf tournament.

The former national champion, who has won the Griswold trophy on each of her last six attempts, posted an 81 to lead a field of 44 starters in the qualifying round, played over a rain-soaked course. Despite the poor conditions, Mrs. Vare played the first nine holes as if she intended to break her own course record of 76, set in 1925. She went out in 37, 1 over men's par, but she picked up four sixes on the back nine for a 44.

Jean Bauer Second.

With one exception, favorites lined up behind Mrs. Vare in the championship division of 16. Jean Bauer, of Providence, winner of the Griswold Cup last year, when Glenna did not compete, finished second with an 84. A stroke farther back was Helen Waterhouse, of Providence, champion of Rhode Island.

Also up among the leaders were Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., with an 87, and Virginia Guilfoil, of Syracuse, N. Y., with 88.

Mrs. Frederick Davis, of Providence, last year's medalist and runner-up, qualified with an 89 while Virginia Bascom, of Worcester, and Kathryn Bragaw, of West Orange, N. J., had close calls with 91 and 92, respectively.

Only upset was the qualifying failure of Carol Smith, of Hartford, Conn., 1936 quarter finalist, whose 97 missed the first division by one stroke.

Mrs. Edwina Nugent, St. Louis, carded 50-46, 96, and Mrs. Thomas W. Conroy, Cincinnati, 49-52, 101.

Upper Half—Mrs. Vare vs. Mrs. R. H. Powers, New London, Conn. (90); Mrs. Davis vs. Mrs. Mary Louise Hitt, New York (87); Miss Guilfoil vs. Mrs. M. G. Missir, Rye, N. Y. (90); Miss Bragaw vs. Helen Waterhouse.

Lower half—Bette Waterhouse, Providence (86) vs. Miss Edwina Nugent, St. Louis; Mrs. C. P. Barney, Hartford (90) vs. Miss Orcutt; Mary Fine, Scranton, Pa. (89) vs. Janet Younker, New York (90); Miss Bascom vs. Miss Bauer.

Mid-Atlantic Play Date Now July 22

The Middle Atlantic doubles tournament, originally scheduled for Saturday, July 17, at the Army-Navy Country Club, has been postponed, and will begin, instead, on Thursday, July 22.

Tom Mangan, chairman of the tournament committee of the club, announced last night that after considering and rejecting a motion to move the date up to July 15, an agreement was reached and the date set for the twenty-second.

An annual affair, the tournament is to decide the Middle Atlantic sectional title and is exclusively a doubles tournament. The winning team is eligible to enter the national competition in Boston later in the summer. Gil Hunt and Ralph McEllvaney comprised the winning team last year.

Dear Al,

Jockeys are like prize fighters. If they could be kept away from big spending money they would last much longer in their chosen profession. Racing history is spotted with cases of riders to whom prosperity was disastrous. As long as they are hungry and need cash, they will ride their heads off. But with the exceptions of the more level-headed, jockeys make their money quickly and spend it in a like manner. Here's an example of what a jockey will do when he comes into the money suddenly This rider had been a good apprentice, he had gotten some mounts after he lost his allowance but little by little he drifted back. Weight started to build on him and he seemed definitely headed for the has been ranks. Then he took a job working horses. Among them was a stake horse to which he became attached. He begged the trainer for a chance to ride in a big race. The trainer and owner agreed. He rode the horse and rode well, winning. The jockey's share of the stake was a handsome one. His success in the stake race earned him two mounts the following Monday and three on Tuesday. On Wednesday he was scheduled to ride three horses. However, he reported sick and left the track. That night a friend met him on the street. "I thought you were sick," said the friend. "Not me," came back the jockey, "I took the day off to try out that new car. Boy did it go? I had that thing up to 85 and didn't even have my foot on the floorboard." See you at Charles Town Wednesday.

BILL.

First race—Prim Wick seems nicely suited in the day's opening event, and needs only careful handling to dash home with the long end of the purse. Crusand and Findon probably will chase the top one to the wire.

Second race—Caravan Queen has shown much speed on occasions, and this looks like the right spot. Clever Girl is a fair sport and seems headed for the thick of contention. Grey Simon for the show end.

Third race—Fair Company appears to be the best bet of the day, but will have no time to loaf. Chardash has improved of late and is dangerous. Rich Cream is worthy of a money position.

Fourth race—Maxine F. and She-knows should battle it out for the major portion of this purse. Both are fit and ready, and I prefer them in the order named. True Tune may get into the pay.

Fifth race—Melody Maid is a speedy miss and one that appears headed for big things in this field. She works well and needs only to run her race. Amhurst and French Trap are capable of giving the top one a run for the money.

Sixth race—Emily Jane likes this route and promises to do a lot of running. Sun Apollo has some class and looms as a threat. Inactive is action on occasions.

Seventh race—Miss Tiptoe, a bang-up second in her last, may take the measure of Treasure Ship in this event. Flying Gypsy should account for the minor award.

Rippy and Oliveri Are Tied in Public Links Tournament With 141's

Subpar Golf Recorded in Titular Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Playing side by side and shot for shot over East Potomac's peninsula golf course, Claude Rippy, the lanky defending champion, and Andy Oliveri, a stocky challenger, paced the public links field by 8 strokes yesterday at the halfway point in the play for the city title and representation in the national event. They had identical subpar 141.

Rippy, who has golfed four times in the past seven weeks, played the downtown municipal course from memory and was three under perfect figures, despite a day-long putting lapse that cost him eight three-putt greens. Eleven birdies dotted his 36-hole card.

In a four-way tie for third place, bracketed at 149, were Bobby Burton, last year's Harding Cup team member, with 78 and 71; Jerry Hart, a recent student at the University of Arkansas, making his local tournament debut, with 75 and 74; James Gipe, 74 and 75, and Harold Bowers, who added an afternoon 73 to his original 76.

An even par 72 in the second round netted Clyde Hally a place within nine strokes of the coleaders, while a stroke behind came Harry Saunders, the horseshoe king, 76 and 75. Nicholas King was within striking distance for a place on the four-man Harding Cup team with 80 and 72, pacing Ted Burrows, a qualifier last year; Gil Willett, of the golfing Willett family; Melvin Skaggs, W. W. Seay, the East Potomac champion, and Bobby Bowers, all by a stroke.

Oliveri, finalist in the Woodmont Invitation and winner of numerous public links tourneys, placed a quartet of second shots dead on the pin on the last nine and holed four sizable putts for a 32, four under par, and the score that enabled him to tag Rippy.

His morning card of even par 72 included four birdies, as many bogeys and an even dozen pars. He slipped to 37 on his third nine, remarking at the time that if his putts would drop he was in for a "hot round." He settled but one green all day long.

The perenial champion and finalist in the National last year, played the G course in 35 strokes on his two trips over the course, and F in 37, one over and 34. The latter score was made on the final nine and included three birdies.

Pat Axtell, member of the '36 cup team, soared to 83 strokes on his morning round and was virtually out of consideration for a place on the four-man team. His total of 160 is 11 behind the four tied for third place.

Rippy, Oliveri and Burton, pacesetters, who attracted the gallery yesterday, have been paired again today and are favored to settle the issue in their own private threesome. They play their twin rounds at 10:10 and 1:40.

Cards of the leaders, scores of the 70 starters and pairings and starting times for today's play follow:

Jack Kennedy To Meet Pinto On Arena Mat

Robert - Russell Grapple in Feature Bout Thursday Night.

Jack Kenndey, the good looking Texan who has won his last two matches here, yesterday was secured to meet Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber, in the semi-windup to the feature wrestling match between Yvon Robert, former world champion, and Reb Russell, Thursday night at Griffith Stadium.

This is Kennedy's second semi-final spot on Promoter Turner's mat card. He is due to land in a main go role before long. Kennedy last disposed of Jack Hader, the villainous Kansan.

Three good 30-minute preliminary bouts also were carded, one of which brings together Jack Hader and George Lenihan, the one-man roit squad, by special demand.

Robert, the handsome French Canadian, anxious to regain his crown, arrives tomorrow for a tune-up drill at the arena. He is breaking in his kid brother, Bob, and will put on a public workout.

Still fresh in our mind was the 3-pound hardhead that Rhea Deibaugh had caught off Tall Timbers, trolling with a No. 1 Huntington drone, while Rudy Wilson was hung on a good-sized weakfish and all the rest of the lines were filled with large rock, for we were right in the midst of a shoal of the big fellows cavorting on the top in a manner that took your mind off the task at hand.

ACKERMAN

Not any too husky, it looked for awhile as though that hardhead had her stopped with a type of battle that would have done justice to any top-striking fish, and because of more than 30 years of fishing for a background that showed no like happening, we were just curious enough to draw on the experience of some of the old-timers around Solomons to see whether or not they ever caught one in the same way. Several had, but always with heavily weighted lures and generally on a sharp turn that allowed them to sink well down.

To catch the weakfish was in no way out of the ordinary, beyond the fact that we are still wondering what it was doing in a shoal of rock, many of which easily exceeded 30 pounds in weight.

* * * *

The largest rock out of this Tall Timbers shoal of which we have any knowledge, was a 24-pounder, but there were stories of other fish that topped 35. For publication these big fellows always weigh 14 poonds odd. Just what we would do in case the Goddess of Luck should so smile upon us is a problem that as yet has still to be met. In all likelihood we would follow the general custom of the bay country.

Early the second day at Solomons Joann was nosing her way around all of the well-known rock grounds. First at Cedar Point to try the shoal that when we first hit them two seasons ago, were little more than keepers, and which last year had grown to around two pounds, and, according to reports of those who have been in them are better than three this year.

* * *

No soap there, nor with the shoal that has given the netters so many fine catches in the Cove Point section, so nothing to do but run up above the island to Patience in search of our old "friends'" rock that have grown to such a size during the past 12 or 15 years that the weight limit is always a possibility.

Rudy Wilson always accepted the responsibility for poor fishing, but he had left Joann at Piney Point and he had caught fish, so it is just possible that his jinx might have lit on someone else, for nary a flip was seen around Point Patience before it was decided to run in under the bluffs back of Town Point, while the wants of the inner man was satisfied.

* * *

Although Kirk Miller has a dock this season, it was thought inadvisable to land, so instead of viewing at close hand, we stayed well off and admired the many improvements to his Club Car, and waited for the late evening rise of rock off the point.

It materialized, but was disappointing, both as to numbers and size of the fish, so after many unproductive circles we ran in in company with Capt. Harry Woodburn, who had run up to Ellen's Bar with his family in one of his many fine fishing party boats.

* * *

Have you local anglers ever given any thought to the fine fleets of party boats these Solomon Islanders have, so that you may enjoy your sport in comfort and safety? Mention was made several days ago of the flee of the Lores. Capt Harry Woodburn's also plays a large part, for there are eight fine boats in it, in making this point one of the best equipped along the Atlantic coast. And with that remember that when you can't catch fish in this section you aren't liable to catch them anywhere. The Chesapeake Bay fishing fair did well to pick this place for their jamboree during September.

* * *

The following day was lost as far as fishing was concerned for Commodore Joe Lore extended an invitation to go along with the committee of the new Solomon Island Yacht Club on their task of tentatively laying out the course for their first sanctioned meet that is to be held next month. Down from New York as representative of the American Power Boat Association, was Charles F. Chapman, editor of Motor Boating and one of the grandest men in boat circles; George Townsend, head of the great Davis Shipyard, who is doing far more than his share to make this first meet a success; Dr. R. V. Truitt, University of Maryland, head of the Maryland Shellfish Commission, who on the preceding day had extended an invitation to visit his laboratory and learn first hand of his work with the blue crab and of the unaccountable migration of the Chesapeake Bay rock from one section to another in such short periods of time as to be almost unbelievable.

This is another story for another time, for now it is back to the Joann and across the creek to turn in, for while it is exciting to lay at Joe Lore's dock and view the catches as they come in, it is also hard on the needed rest and makes getting up in the morning a real chore.

John Kinder Paces Field At Shawnee

Cliff Spencer's 73 Paces Washington Players; Cox Has 75.

By the Associated Press.

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., July 12.—Johnny Kinder, young Plainfield, N. J., professional, with a par-shattering 69, paced a strong field over the Shawnee Country Club course today in the first 18 holes of the twenty-first Shawnee Open golf championship.

Celebrating his birthday, the former Jersey Open champion, dropped putts from all corners to account for six birdies and nine pars to score 35—34—69.

Seventeen golfers were within four strokes of the leader despite his sizzling pace, with most of the contending places occupied by the youngsters of the professional golf field. Pretournament favorites such as Harry Cooper, Wild Bill Mehlhorn, Lawson Little, were forced to trail this group by a shot or more.

Cooper started with a severe cold that accounted for his most erratic round in two years—a disappointing 79.

Pan-American Games Attract Star Runners

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 12.—The pick of this country's athletic talent was en route to Dallas and the Pan-American games, opening Thursday.

Fifteen track and field performers left New York immediately after the second annual world labor meet, held in Randalls Island Stadium yesterday. Others were heading for Dallas from other points.

In the squad which left New York were Elroy Robinson, San Francisco Olympic Club ace who set up a new world's half-mile record of 1:49.6; Johnny Woodruff, of Pitt, who will shift to that event after an unsuccessful debut in big-time mile racing; Ben Johnson and Perrin Walker, who finished one-two in the 100-yard dash; Jack Weierhauser, the 220-yard winner; Ray Malott and Robert Young, who finished first and third in the 440; Allan Tolmich, Wayne's versatile star who won the 220-yard low hurdles; Dave Albritton,

Anna Leigus Wins Net Upset By Defeating Eileen Lennon

The first startling reversal of form from the girls' singles tennis tournament conducted by the Department of Playgrounds has produced came yesterday in the second round when Anna Leigus, of Georgetown, star playground track athlete, upset Eileen Lennon, of Montrose, 6—3, 8—10, 6—3, at Chevy Chase.

For several years one of the ranking playground net stars, Miss Lennon, a quarter-finalist last summer, was given an outside chance of winning the title vacated by Willie O'Steen, of Virginia Avenue. But Miss Leigus' steady stroking overcame the slight Montrose player in the third set after the second had been most bitterly fought.

Another Montrose entrant, Betty Jacobs, sister of Morgan (Happy) Jacobs, a leading local player several years ago, moved into the third round, however, with a three-set victory over Joan Beadle, of Chevy Chase. The scores were 6—1, 1—6, 6—4.

On the Air Today

Ted Shawn, assistant to Kenneth Berkeley, general manager of N. B. C., here in Washington says:

"No. There is, however, an attempt on the part of the broadcasters to bring to the listeners a "classical-type" program, for example, the dramatization of Shakespeare's plays, or the many symphony concerts. The listeners are demanding these educational and cultural programs.

"Certain programs appeal to some people and another program will appeal to another group of people. The old 'bromide' of the average mental age of the radio audience being set at 13 years is a stage gag, and nothing else."

The man-on-the-street was queried about the new Shakespearean dramas appearing on both Columbia and National, and his response in 90 per cent of the cases seemed to take the side that this new-type program was preferable. First, he had not had the opportunity to read Shakespeare in school, and, second, if he had studied the Bard's plays in school, he was very anxious to hear a modern version broadcast over the radio. One person interviewed "never heard of Shakespeare."

Shirley Povich, sports writer for this paper, was queried about the English playwright; was amazed, and said he didn't know that Shakespeare was still writing plays. In a serious moment later, he commented that it was a definite trend toward a higher plane of radio entertainment.

Miss Ann Gillis, director of public affairs for Columbia's outlet here in the District, WJSV, did not hesitate when the above query was telephoned.

"Any broadcasting company," she stated, "gives its listeners what they want. And in connection with 'high-browish' broadcasts . . . why, four or five years ago when we put the New York Philharmonic Orchestra on the air . . . we had little response . . . but try and cut the program today. Kicks come in by the bushel."

"And another thing," she continued, "the radio listener can tune in on his or her radio exactly to what he or she wants, by first intelligently studying the time table in the daily paper. There is a wide variety of programs offered and somewhere at sometime the ideal program can be heard."

"Wait a minute, there's something else," the telephone carried, "those pol

Heavy Receipts Of New Wheat Lower Prices

Visible Supply Makes Substantial Gain During Week.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 12. — Augmented selling pressure because of big receipts of new domestic winter wheat, and much profit-taking for early buyers, pulled Chicago wheat values lower today.

Declines of prices came chiefly in late transactions after the wheat market had ruled higher most of the day because of floods of pessimistic crop reports from the United States spring wheat belt and also from Canada. Accelerating the downturn of wheat values at the last was announcment that the United States wheat visible supply total had increased 11,459,000 bushels today against 5,005,000 bushels increase last week, and 7,577,000 increase the corresponding week last year.

The Market

Steels and Oils Lead Recovery in More Active Trading; Sterling Higher.

New York, July 12.—All-around improvement in financial markets took place. The turnover in stocks rose to around 1,000,000 shares and advances were common, running from a fraction in slow sections to 4 or 5 points in the favorites. Best prices were paid in the final hour. Bonds were buoyant in convertible lists and firm in other sections. Francs and sterling continued to stiffen. September wheat softened ⅞ of a cent to 121⅜ cents a bushel.

The continued hot weather acted adversely on stock market sentiment, but the trade news over the week-end was largely favorable. Political developments, aside from the fighting in China, were at the worst negative. Reflecting the passing of the C. I. O. strikes, which the independent steel companies apparently have won in spite of the early sympathy of the Government for the Lewis faction and, by example at least, the support of United States Steel, and reflecting also the pick-up after the holiday, steel operations this week will rise to 82.7 per cent. That is the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute, and compares with 67.3 per cent last week and 69 per cent a year ago.

Steel Upturn.

Steel demand sufficient to hold up the operating rate at that level so late in the summer is the outstanding fact of the industrial situation. No one factor can account for it, and if the hoped for buying by the railroads, to say nothing of a much delayed building recovery, gets under way, one of steel's best peace-time years will be experienced.

The weekly review of agriculture conditions made by the Department of Agriculture notes favorable crops in most sections of the country. Only a small part of the West has been hurt by drought. The large wheat and other grain harvest in prospect and the cotton crop increase bound to come from the increased planting, coupled with the high prices, will do much toward creating active business this autumn, in spite of what Congress may do or what labor organizers still may attempt.

Confidence in securities, which rests on business confidence, has undergone a remarkable change in the past ten days, a change sufficient to lift the price of Steel common, for instance, by about 20 per cent, and many other stocks almost as much. When confidence is rising the higher it goes the more momentum it gathers, just as gloom deepens at a faster rate on a decline. Not only are investors and traders now more willing to buy, but the lifting of restrictions on accounts as prices rise increases their ability to buy.

Early prices this morning were somewhat mixed, but a strong forward movement in steel soon changed the drift. By afternoon steel had sold at 112, and after absorbing some profit taking, it proceeded further for a rise of more than 4 points. The stock gained 7 points last week and is now commanding the best price since the final week of April. Other steel shares rallied, some of them rising 2 points or so.

Railroad Earnings.

The Alton Railroad, the first to report June earnings, had another deficit and a somewhat larger one than was shown in the corresponding month of a year ago. In spite of the fact that railroad car loadings in June increased 10.7 per cent over the same month of last year, the higher expenditures for maintenance and improvements in the month brought a rise in the operating ratio for many roads. That also happened in May.

Rolling Mill.

The new $45,000,000 issue of 4½ per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock of American Rolling Mill carries a call on the common stock that promises to give it a sporting appeal. The call on the common goes at $40 a share for the first two years, advancing thereafter. That is only about 2 points above the current market and will help to dispose of the issue at a price a little above par.

Interest Rates.

Except in leading Southern and Western cities, in which money always is scarcer than in the North and East, the trend of interest rates in June was distinctly downward, according to the compilation of average rates charged customers by banks made by the Federal Reserve Board. The New York City average rate dropped from 2.44 per cent to 2.34 per cent, compared with 2.44 in June of last year. In other Northern and Eastern cities the decline was from 3.45 to 3.32 per cent. The June averages were the lowest on record for New York and the other cities. The average for Southern and Western cities, on the other hand, shaded upward from 4.17 per cent to 4.18 per cent. The lowest point was touched in December, at 4.14 per cent.

Steel Operations Rebound to 82.7%

New York, July 12 (AP).—After being depressed for several weeks by strikes and seasonal curtailment over Fourth of July, steel production has bounced back to 82.7 per cent of capacity from 67.3 a week ago, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

This compares with an operating rate of 69 per cent a year ago. The current week's rate is the highest since late in May, when strikes hit operations of some of the large independent mills and checked production after new records for ingot output had been established.

Business Failures.

New York, July 12.—Business failures in the United States for the week ended July 8 totaled 108, lowest for any week since 1920, due to the July 4 holiday, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Cost of Living Gains Slightly During May

Decline in Food Prices Is Offset by Rise in Rents and Clothing.

New York, July 12.—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States in June, 1937, was slightly 0.1 per cent higher than in May, according to the monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. A decline in food prices was offset by increases in rents and clothing prices. Living costs in June of this year, however, were 4.5 per cent higher than a year ago, and 24 per cent higher than at the low point of 1933, although still 10.6 per cent below the level of June, 1929.

Food prices declined 0.2 per cent from May to June, but they were 3 per cent higher than in June, 1936, and 44 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933. Food prices in June of this year were still 16.7 per cent below the Juue, 1929 level.

Rents continued on their upward trend, rising 0.6 per cent from May to June. Rents are now 11.6 per cent higher than a year ago, 38.1 per cent higher than the beginning of 1934, their low point, and only 5.9 per cent lower than in June, 1929.

Rise in Clothing.

Clothing prices in June, 1937, were 0.3 per cent higher than in May, 4.9 per cent higher than in June, 1936, and 26.7 per cent higher than at the low of 1933, although still 21.6 per cent below the level of June, 1929.

Coal prices averaged the same in June as in May, but were 0.7 per cent lower than a year ago and 7.9 per cent lower than in June, 1929.

The cost of sundries as a whole remained the same in June as in May. A decline in carfare rates was offset by increases in the prices of drugs and toilet articles, house furnishings, and candy. The cost of sundries in June of this year was 2.7 per cent higher than a year ago, 7.3 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933, and only 2.2 per cent lower than in June, 1929.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 112.5 cents in June, as compared with 112.6 cents in May, 117.5 cents in June, 1936, and 100 cents in 1923.

Fatter Purses Face Test of Higher Prices

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, July 12.—A test of the power of the consumers' purse to stand higher prices has been in the making as business prepares for autumn and year-end trade, usually the most important half of the year along the retail marts.

Bulging with more dollars flowing from higher wages, dividends and farm prices, the consumers' money bag at the same time has been feeling the squeeze of rising prices for manufactured goods.

Price mark-ups in many lines have been reported in midyear wholesale markets. They have touched carpets, furniture, wearing apparel, tools and other manufactured goods.

Retail prices on the average have been steadily on the upgrade for a year. Larger crops held out prospect for some easing of the strain from rising food costs. But manufactured goods, trade observers reported, have been tagged with higher prices to absorb advances in raw materials, wages and other operating costs in the first half of the year.

Auto Price Advance Seen.

Some authorities looked for an advance in prices on automobiles as a notable landmark of the trend in the final half of this year. Leading speculative commodities, usually the heralds of change in wholesale and retail quotations, have fallen from the early spring heights. This has been accepted in financial quarters as an indication the advance in prices of manufactured goods also may taper before the end of the year.

Meanwhile, merchants have recognized the consumer, as the ultimate court of appeal, must register his verdict, based on ability to match spending power with the advance in prices.

Business has been riding a merry-go-round of rising prices for more than four years, with occasional halts. The advance has made the circuit of raw materials, wholesale and retail prices and wages, with trade steadily mounting to higher levels and industry stepping up production to supply the increasing flow of goods into consumers' hands.

How long this spiral can continue is a question analysts have been seeking to answer in light of the latest wave of price hikes for manufeatured goods and rising pay rolls and farm income.

No Gold Engaged; First Time in 2 Months

New York, July 12 (AP).—The long continued flow of foreign gold to the United States showed signs of drying up today. For the first time in two months there were no reported engagements abroad for shipment here.

Engagements have been declining gradually since devaluation of the French franc, although banking circles estimated $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 is in transit on account of previous transactions. Tapering of the movement was also coincident with a rise in the pound sterling rate, which had the effect of lowering the price of gold in the London open market. This made it less profitable to ship gold here at the United States Government's price of $35 an ounce.

Fatter Purses Face Test of Higher Prices

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, July 12.—A test of the power of the consumers' purse to stand higher prices has been in the making as business prepares for autumn and year-end trade, usually the most important half of the year along the retail marts.

Bulging with more dollars flowing from higher wages, dividends and farm prices, the consumers' money bag at the same time has been feeling the squeeze of rising prices for manufactured goods.

Price mark-ups in many lines have been reported in midyear wholesale markets. They have touched carpets, furniture, wearing apparel, tools and other manufactured goods.

Retail prices on the average have been steadily on the upgrade for a year. Larger crops held out prospect for some easing of the strain from rising food costs. But manufactured goods, trade observers reported, have been tagged with higher prices to absorb advances in raw materials, wages and other operating costs in the first half of the year.

Auto Price Advance Seen.

Some authorities looked for an advance in prices on automobiles as a notable landmark of the trend in the final half of this year. Leading speculative commodities, usually the heralds of change in wholesale and retail quotations, have fallen from the early spring heights. This has been accepted in financial quarters as an indication the advance in prices of manufactured goods also may taper before the end of the year.

Meanwhile, merchants have recognized the consumer, as the ultimate court of appeal, must register his verdict, based on ability to match spending power with the advance in prices.

Business has been riding a merry-go-round of rising prices for more than four years, with occasional halts. The advance has made the circuit of raw materials, wholesale and retail prices and wages, with trade steadily mounting to higher levels and industry stepping up production to supply the increasing flow of goods into consumers' hands.

How long this spiral can continue is a question analysts have been seeking to answer in light of the latest wave of price hikes for manufeatured goods and rising pay rolls and farm income.

No Gold Engaged; First Time in 2 Months

New York, July 12 (AP).—The long continued flow of foreign gold to the United States showed signs of drying up today. For the first time in two months there were no reported engagements abroad for shipment here.

Engagements have been declining gradually since devaluation of the French franc, although banking circles estimated $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 is in transit on account of previous transactions. Tapering of the movement was also coincident with a rise in the pound sterling rate, which had the effect of lowering the price of gold in the London open market. This made it less profitable to ship gold here at the United States Government's price of $35 an ounce.

Meat Packers Omit Usual Dividend

New York, July 12 (AP).—Directors of John Morrell & Co., Mid-west meat packers, today paid the dividend on capital stock due at this time. The company paid dividends of 60 cents each on February 3 and May 3 of this year.

T. Henry Foster, president, said scarcity of supplies in the companies territory, severely hit by last year's drought, makes operations unprofitable. "The company will likely withhold dividends until there has been an opportunity to turn the new corn crop, progressing excellently in Morrell's Iowa territory, into pork," he added. The company's main plant is at Ottumwa, Iowa.

A MISTAKE

But not intentional. It was stated in our advertisement in Saturday and Sunday's papers that water and sewer is available for the lots and acreage we are selling at

PUBLIC AUCTION IN LEE HEIGHTS

WEDNESDAY, JULY 14th at 10:30 A. M.

While this is the truth yet it might be misleading. What we intended to convey is that water and sewer reaches the property on N. Vernon Street, shown on map as old Spring street and this can be made available by building to or from the present lines which touch and are adjacent to the property we are selling. The purpose of our organization is intelligent and honest service, helping the seller to sell and helping the buyer to buy, furnishing information accurately and impartially.

THE ONE IMPORTANT FACT IS

That this is an Executors Sale which means your opportunity to buy at your own price. Another important fact is that the terms are so reasonable, most anybody can afford to buy at least one of these lots.

Burlesque Tiptoes Back to Broadway Minus Strip-Tease

New York, July 12 (AP).—Stripped of strip-tease and calling itself "variety," burlesque gingerly tiptoed back onto Broadway today after two months in the city license commissioner's laundry.

Chorus girls with plenty of clothes on—the producers call it "clothed nudity"—giggled embarrassedly and went through the humdrum kicks and whirls that used to presage an exhibition of undressing and—then the curtain went down.

The performance marked the renaissance of "Minskyism" in three of 13 closed emporiums. The three revivals represented three managers who had deposited $250 for a three-month temporary license, renewable if their acts behave.

Judging Begins In D.C. on Auto Model Contest

McKinley School Teachers Help Rule on Entries in $80,000 Competition.

Judging began yesterday at the Smithsonian Institution of approximately 70 automobile models entered in the Fisher Body Craftsman Guild $80,000 scholarship competition by boys from the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Delaware.

George S. Lawson and William L. Brown, of Detroit, were assisted in the judging by J. Elmer Zearfoss, head of the manual training department of McKinley High School, and his associate, L. T. Brown. Winners will be announced Friday.

Prizes will consist of trips to a guild convention at Cleveland, 14 local awards ranging up to $100, and the chance to compete for one or more $5,000 university scholarships.

This is the first automobile model contest sponsored by the guild, which is an educational foundation organized by General Motors to encourage boys in the study of the crafts. The seventh annual Napoleonic coach contest of the organization will be held in August.

The automobile and coach competitions have been established on an equal basis. The only limitations in the new model car design contest is that the scale of 1 inch to 1 foot must be used and all models must be constructed so that an actual car built to the same specifications would have sufficient head room, leg room and breadth to accommodate five or six persons comfortably.

3 Sport Ensembles!

PALM BEACH

Here's how a White Palm Beach at only 16.75 gives you three smart sport ensembles for summer wear. First, wear the entire suit . . . for afternoons, evenings or on your vacation. Next, contrast the white coat, either single or double breasted, in sports or plain backs, with any color trousers or slacks in your wardrobe. Smart worn evenings or summer formals. It doesn't make any difference if they're blue, grey, tan, green, plaid, check, stripe or plain shades. White is a neutral color and goes well with anything. And finally, as the third suit, contrast the white trousers with a sports or plain back coat. This outfit can be worn any hour of the day or night. Another important feature about Palm Beach is that it either launders or dry cleans to perfection.
